FIVE HUNDRED FIFTY-TWO LOMA LINDA UNIVERSITY students received diplomas at the annual spring commencement ceremonies held in the stadium at the University of California at Riverside.

An estimated 7,000 persons sat in and around the university's stadium, so Dr. Judd delivered a fiery address, attacking the Communist threat and predicting total defeat.

"People say that communism has changed its goals, but don't you believe it. Just show me a person who has rejected the goal of world communism?"

Dr. Judd drew applause from the audience when he said "If we've got 20 percent unemployed in the country, let's look at the 80 percent who are employed, see why they're employed, and see what we can do to make sure they stay employed, so that the 80 percent can help the 20 percent."

"As a former liberal friend, I'm a conservative because I want to be in a position to be liberal.

In his address, Dr. Judd emphasized that students should give more attention to the desires of youth, for youth are not from ideas, but from the generation of emotional enthusiasm to carry out those ideas.

"It may have been regarded as a fad, but some now to believe in a cause with young enthusiasm and a young whole heart. Perhaps the civil disobedience have been among the great contributions to the reformation of thought. But let's channel that enthusiasm into worthwhile objectives.

The Summer commencement exercise was the University's first to be held on the UCR campus. undergraduate exercises have been held at the Redlands Bowl, Redlands.

Sunday's ceremony was the first to be held on the UCR campus. Previous commencement exercises have been held at the Redlands Bowl, Redlands.

OVER 500 LOMA LINDA UNIVERSITY students received diplomas at the annual spring commencement ceremony last Sunday. An estimated 7,000 guests attended the graduation services held in the Stadium at University of California at Riverside.

Kidney transplant patient builds new life

Paul Anderson leaned over to turn the stereo set he had finished building from a kit.

"No, I'm not working right now," said Anderson, straightening up.

"I had to stay in the hospital for a month after the operation, normal. I do about anything I want, and there are no special diets or anything," Anderson says.

The bill for months of costly dialyses, which are usually performed while the patient is on the transplant, and instead I'm alive thanks only to a medical miracle, but he talks freely of his experience.

First transplant

"It was a year ago this week that I became the first person to have a kidney transplant at Loma Linda University Hospital," he recalls. "That was when they still had the old hospital at Loma Linda, instead of the big new one that opened last summer."

"I had been in the hospital for just over three months, undergoing continual hemodialysis (a blood purification procedure performed by the so-called kidney machine). That was all I kept me alive while my doctors, all research men on the medical staff at the School of Medicine at Loma Linda, tried to find a suitable donor kidney to transplant."

"The long wait was terribly tiresome for me, and the bills were mounting up every day."

Finally, Anderson himself read in the newspaper of a fire victim whose kidneys were damaged and could not be used. Later the same day, however, a surgeon at Riverside General Hospital - University Medical Center called back.

"I think we have a kidney you can use," he reported. This time the patient was the victim of a traffic accident, injured beyond hope of survival but with his kidneys apparently undamaged. Blood types and similar tests indicated a suitable match with Anderson.

Family agrees

The family of the dying man, Virgil B. Hurst, 45, of Riverside, and the Riverside hospital surgeons who are also members of the Loma Linda University medical faculty, removed one of his kidneys about an hour and a half after his death the following Sunday afternooon.

Surgical transplant at Loma Linda was simultaneously preparing artificial kidney, made out of some kind of plastic. Mary also Anderson is set up for the rest of her life, as a transplanted kidney, which at present is not used,

Paul Anderson has been told that his second transplant is due any day now, and that the operation is actually scheduled for this week. Anderson is anxious for his second transplant.

"I think my assignment is to improve the patient's life, for the patient is set up for the rest of his life."
Recently many students of Seventh-day Adventist colleges and universities throughout the United States participated in the Choice '68 National Collegiate Presidential Primary sponsored as a public service program by the UNIA Division of Sperry Rand in cooperation with Time magazine.

The last issue of University SCOPE reported the results of the primary from the La Sierra campus of Loma Linda University. Thirty-seven percent of the students (the same as the Vietnam situation) voted for George C. Wallace, the former governor of Alabama, as their second choice. No results are available on their attitudes toward Vietnam.

Conclusion

Choice '68

The interesting data in the editions of SCOPE (Choice '68 issues) confirmed first-hand observations of attitudes at La Sierra University, Berrien Springs, Michigan, students voted to intensify the bombing (37 percent); five percent suggested the use of nuclear weapons; and 17 percent voted for a total withdrawal from Vietnam.

To the Editor

I read your editorial yesterday morning at breakfast and was interested in the direction your paper is taking. I have been a subscriber for a number of years and am glad to see your attitude becoming more consistent with the traditional Seventh-day Adventist position on noncombatancy.

It is utterly astonishing that a campus of young people who generally support the conscientious objection position could be so much more hawkish than the national student voting pattern. It would seem that some concentration of effort is necessary to resolve this contradiction.

Brehms’ ‘Requiem’ to be presented by Oratorio Singers

The beautiful classic Brahms’ Requiem will be presented in concert by the Oratorio Singers under the direction of G. S. Beltz, Saturday afternoon, June 8, at Warner Hall.

For a long time, psychology has lived under a cloud of uncertainty in Adventist circles. Now is the uncertainty restricted to the Adventist community, for by its very nature the study of the human mind involves the sphere of Christian theology.

The relationship between psychology and Christianity has been the subject of a multitude of books in recent years; now comes a book setting forth the distinctive Adventist position on this subject. Psychology and Christianity is a serious and valuable contribution to the problems of psychology. Unfortunately, the book tells nothing of personal experience and, from other sources, we learn that he graduated from the School of Medicine of Loma Linda University in 1925, and is currently serving on the medical staff of the Bella Vista Hospital in Portland, Oregon.

Vital topic

Duflo’s book is understandable to the layman, and contains a number of topics vital to Christians. The main disagreements between secular psychotherapy and traditional Adventist counseling arise from the assumption that psychoanalysis, spiritualism, and mental healing: these are more of the topics he discusses.

Considering psychology in the light of the Christian ministry, Duflo believes that not only can psychology provide valuable tools to complement the principles of true psychology found in the Bible and in the writings of such figures as E. G. White, but it is important to examine the practical implications of basic issues, such as the basis of truth, the diagnosis and treatment of mental illness. "These different approaches to human experience are not at variance, but they are also very wide apart. On the one hand, they underlie the entire world of science and philosophy. More and more, the Christian is obliged to challenge one of the basic assumptions of the Spirit of the universe, namely, that man’s reason and experience are the ultimate ground and test of the truth." People are at risk of losing the real answer to these questions, if the Spirit of God, cannot be depended upon to read nature

In an article titled "The Modern Revival of the Confessional," the author discusses confessional movements: the Roman Catholic confessional, Protestant forms of pastoral counseling, and secular psychology as psychoanalysis as a form of therapy. He describes how the patient undergoing this therapy experiences "a triumph of relief, of escape from guilt feeling." The psychiatrist, he says, "typically believes that when he has got rid of the guilt. Sierra students take first place in temperance meet
Thomas A. Petersen, junior art major, won first place in the national poster contest sponsored by Action Unit for Better Living, a national temperance organization.
A cash award was presented to Mr. Petersen by Robert H. Pierson, president of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, at the last chapel exercises of the semester on the Riverside campus of the University.
First place winner in the Sierra temperance speech contest was selected by Dennis L. Welebir, senior theology major. Mr. Welebir's speech was judged best in California state temples, the only state to send its speech contest. The competition was held in conjunction with the Abstinence Week. The title of his talk was "Russian Roulette."
