Graduate students, professor, to study Pacific coral

Ariel A. Roth, PhD, chairman of the Graduate School department of biology, has announced plans for a four-month field research trip beginning in February to islands in the western Pacific Ocean to study factors affecting the growth rate of coral.

To begin the trip, Dr. Roth will join Graduate School students Donald D. Claassen and Walter W. Cox at the Hawaii Institute of Marine Biology, Kauai, Hawaii, for over six weeks of laboratory research.

Another month of research will take place at the Koror Entomology Laboratory, Koror, Palau Island in the Caroline Islands.

Dr. Roth’s research team will attempt to identify the main coral reef organisms, how fast they grow under defined conditions, and factors affecting the rate of growth. The study is a follow-up of some studies in Hawaii on one species of coral shown to optimum growth rate in 80 degree warm water.

In studying the growth rate, Dr. Roth’s group will study temperature, light, and current circulation factors in trying to determine reef development.

Coral consists of living organisms forming colonies by joining together in a close-knit, interlocking group. These organisms thrive in a warm water environment. Some species of coral are responsible for the large reefs surrounding many islands in the tropic zones of the world.

Other points on Dr. Roth’s tentative itinerary include stops at Guam, Yap, Kosrae, Eniwetok, the Philippines, New Guinea, Samoa, the Fiji, New Caledonia, Bora Bora, Tahiti, and Australia. The team is scheduled to return to Los Angeles on June 15.

Television camera crew films student-run Bryn Mawr clinic

A television camera crew from KNXT-TV, Los Angeles, the Columbia Broadcasting System, southern California, filmed a report last week on the one-night-a-week medical clinic in Bryn Mawr.

Organized by medical students at the University, the clinic in Bryn Mawr, and one in North Colton, has treated 568 patients in the nine months since they were started.

The clinics are located in poverty pockets of the area and patients are usually unable to afford proper medical treatment. In addition, the patients are “people who think they are sick, but do not know how sick,” observes Dr. Elder. At the Bryn Mawr clinic alone, they found 13 patients with lung infections, four of whom were tuberculosis patients.

NM state police commend courage of nursing student

Lynn I. Zaha, SN70, received commendations from the New Mexico State Police for assisting them with the first aid treatment at the scene of a three-car accident December 21 in New Mexico.

Miss Zaha was entranced to learn of the Christmas holidays with her parents when they came upon the scene of the accident.

According to New Mexico State Police Officer Madrid W. Terry, Miss Zaha began giving medical assistance to the accident victims before state police arrived. He also states that without her early help, some of the injured persons might have been fatal.

Zaha, who was scheduled to ride 15 miles to the hospital with one of the injured persons, giving directions, the accident, having no resuscitation, says Officer Terry.

Sophomore medical students plan series on race relations

An eight-week series of group discussions on race relations among seventh-day Adventists is slated to begin next week, according to Marilyn D. Oakes, SN72, co-chairman of the series.

The discussions, devoted primarily to experience within the Adventist community, will deal with such issues as the effect of color in the community, results of stereotyped thinking on the doctor-patient relationship, and the degree to which a student’s physical appearance and cultural background affects his education at Loma Linda University.

The first meeting of the series, entitled “Do You Know Your Neighbor?”, is slated to begin January 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall, University Church. Leading the discussion that evening will be Clarence R. Newby, a certified public accountant and ten-year resident of Loma Linda.

“The goal of this series,” states Miss Oakes, “is to offer the university community the opportunity of sensitization. In order to listen to each other, we need to be sensitive to something besides color. It is my feeling that a great and very necessary potential for human relationships has been blocked off by an indefinable attitude of sensitiveness toward race and race alone.”

The series is open to all members of the university community. Sponsored by the department of sociology and anthropology, Betty R. Stirling, PhD, associate professor of sociology, is the advisor. Serving with Miss Oakes as co-chairman is Richard R. Hamilton, SN72.

LUBOFF

Miracle. In addition, Mr. Luboff's arrangements were regularly heard with Andy Williams in "The Telephone Hour," The Dinah Shore Show, the Ford Star Jubilee, and the Jerry Lewis Show. Other arrangements were created especially for such artists and music directors as Jo Stafford, Franklin Laine, Doris Day, Harry Belafonte, Rosemary Clooney, Guy Mitchell, Johnny Ray, Dolly Parton, Paul Weston, and Percy Faith.

The Norman Luboff Choir came into existence as a recording entity during that Hollywood period and was an instant success. From 1958 to 1963, while the Luboffs were in England and France, Mr. Luboff began work on his first full-length show, a feeling about Roberts, "Highland Fling." The decision to undertake "live" tours on an extensive scale brought the Luboffs home to their current headquarters, where Peter and Tina, their two children, attend college.

The Riverside concert is part of the Loma Linda University Artist and Lecture Series and is open to the public. Admission charges will be $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students.

Former medical professor dies

Olof Benjamin E. Grant, Sr., SM '20, eminent professor of medicine at Loma Linda University since 1950, died December 28, 1969, in Portland, Oregon.

Dr. Grant served as professor of medicine from 1922 until the outbreak of World War II. At that time, a Seven-day Adventist medical unit, the 47th General Hospital, was mobilized. He was made commanding officer of the unit which saw service in New Guinea and the Philippines.

After World War II, Dr. Grant was attached to the Administration Medical officers in Portland until his retirement six years ago. He is survived by his widow, Anna Raye Simpson Grant.

Enrollment figures expected to rise on university level

Figures issued from the United States Office of Education show enrollment of degree-credit and non-degree-credit students at universities is expected to rise from 58.6 million students in 1945 to 7.1 million this fall, a gain of 2.9 percent. An expected total enrollment of 58.6 million at all levels would be an increase of 1.2 percent over the public 57.9 million students enrolled last fall. The highest percentage gain is at the college level.

What have you done lately that makes you feel proud?

Dr. Anderson, according to Vermont's new attorney general, has not taken any action to correct the complex nature of church and state issues as well as revealing the crisis that is mounting in the area of Federal aid to private education.
