Dear Lexie,

The Year of Hope

Ok, I admit it. I made the same mistake that I'm sure many of us make at this time of the year. When writing this piece for the eWeekend, instead of Designating the year as 2014, out of habit I wrote 2013. I guess old habits are really hard to break. And I'm certain that we all have our share of those that we would like to see removed permanently from our lives. But that's what's so special about the beginning of a new year. Although it may be just another day, it has a way of instilling a sense of hope in our hearts that despite what may have taken place the year before, this year is going to be different. And when you think about it, isn't that what hope does? Despite the darkness that we might be experiencing, hope gives us a vision that there is light at the end of our proverbial tunnel.
This Sabbath:
January 4, 2014

Speaker:
Charles A. Tapp,
"Hope For Trying Times"

Special Musical Guests:
Denise Barclay, soprano

View bulletin>>
View quarterly>>

Connect with Us:
Join mailing list>>

Read more>>

The Wonder of Worship:
Religion In Your Resolution

Happy New Year! For most of us, the New Year is indeed a happy time. Each new year brings the promise of new hopes and dreams. Our ritual on New Year's Eve is to celebrate...

Read more>>

Jesus, One For All
Finding Christ in Christmas

At Christmas we celebrate the birth of Jesus, a name that for people the world over is instantly recognizable as unique, yet for his time was as common as Mohammed is today...

Read more>>

Missed Last Week's Sermon?

Watch Live or OnDemand:
Sliqo WebTV>>

Audio Archive>>

Forward this email