Southern Union Elects New Treasurer

Tom Evans, Southern Union treasurer, has been elected treasurer of the North American Division and associate treasurer of the General Conference. He has been with the Southern Union for two years, and during that time he has been constantly meeting with various entities throughout the Southern Union. It is said of Tom Evans, “He loves to go to committees,” and he has proved that statement to be true. He is interested in all aspects of the mission of the Seventh-day Adventist Church and is anxious for funds to be used for expanding the mission.

While with the Southern Union, Tom married Shirley Chilson, who was at the time administrative assistant for the former NAD treasurer. We say “thank you” to the Evanses for your commitment and for your contribution to ministry in the Southern Union.

The Southern Union Executive Committee unanimously voted to elect Randy Robinson as treasurer of the Southern Union on September 20, 2007. He comes from the Oregon Conference where he has been vice president for finance for the past 10 years. Prior to that he served as treasurer of the Illinois Conference and the Nevada-Utah Conference. He is a graduate of Pacific Union College, with a bachelor of business administration degree.

Denise, his wife, grew up in Asia, where her parents were missionaries. She has a degree in business administration and has worked in healthcare for 20 years. She is presently director of quality improvement and utilization for the second-largest physician organization in the U.S., serving more than 2,200 physicians. She also teaches children’s Sabbath school and is church organist. The Robinsons have two sons: Jason, a sophomore, taking graphics design at Pacific Union College; and Brandon, a seventh-grader who also manages the lighting at the church for church services. Elder Robinson has served the local church as elder and adult Sabbath school class teacher. In 2000, the Robinsons conducted evangelistic meetings in India.

As we have become acquainted with Elder Robinson, it is very clear that his passion is for the Church to be focused on the great commission Jesus gave us—to teach, baptize, and make disciples. He is an astute businessman with the gift of financial management. He believes that the local church should be strong, and that we should do all we can to ensure that local church members can be engaged in the great mission.

It’s a privilege to welcome the Robinson family to leadership in the Southern Union.

Called to Serve

BY ALLAN R. WILLIAMSON

“Called to Serve” was the theme of the Southern Union Pathfinder Camporee, held at Camp Kulaqua in High Springs, Florida, September 26-30, 2007. More than 5,600 were in attendance during the week, and on Sabbath that number topped 6,100 at the Camporee. This was the largest Union Pathfinder Camporee ever held in North America.

I want to thank the camporee planning committee, dedicated area coordinators, club directors, and staff for their tremendous help in supporting this camporee. The largest Pathfinder club at the camporee was Forest City Spanish, with 153 in attendance. The first Pathfinder club to register for the camporee was the Jackson, Mississippi, College Drive Trailblazers. Southern Union Pathfinders are now looking forward to attending the “Courage to Stand” camporee in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, August 11-15, 2009.

More than 5,600 Pathfinders attended the 2007 Southern Union Pathfinder Camporee.

The Pathfinders kept busy each day earning honors at the Honor Midway, attending the Pin Trading School, and enjoying the Camp Kulaqua River Ranch Water Park with its wave pool, lazy river, and giant water slide.

The Pathfinder Museum, hosted by Pathfinder historians Dixie and Arnold Plata, was a very popular exhibit. There were a variety of skilled and fun activities, including the Nature Center and the rodeo at Hope Arena. The Camp Kulaqua Zoo hosted more than 4,000 Pathfinders on Sabbath afternoon. On Thursday and Friday afternoon, drill and marching events and drum corps exhibitions were a highlight. It is amazing to watch the talents and skills of the Pathfinders as they perform. Teen Space was a program where teens could fellowship and network together.

The Pathfinder song was sung at the beginning of each program, followed by a camporee song written by Smokey Mountain Music Man, Bill Young, entitled "Called to Serve." Pathfinders provided quality music during the meetings. Ben Roy, owner and director of Quotes (Ben Roy's Science Film); and Steve Varro, a Christian Illusionist, presented beautiful illustrations of God's creation and love.

Candid Camera, through pictures and music, captured the Pathfinders in action during the day. You can view all the pictures of the camporee at www.southernunioncamporee2007.info, the official Southern Union Camporee web site.

Inspirational speakers included José Rojas, Adventist Volunteer Ministries director for the North American Division; Gordon Retzer, president, Southern Union Conference; Tony Anobile, executive secretary for the Arizona Conference; James Black, youth ministries director for the North American Division; Manny Cruz, associate youth ministries director for the North American Division; and Ken Rogers, vice president for student services at Walla Walla University. Each speaker challenged the Pathfinders to make a commitment to Jesus and be ready to serve. Hundreds of decisions for baptism were made and will be followed up by the club directors.

PathfinderRadio.com is an Internet ministry started by Ken Grant, which shares music, sermons, and stories. All the messages from the camporee speakers were broadcast live on PathfinderRadio.com (visit the web site for details).

grand parade of all eight conferences as we gathered for morning worship. A Master Guide investiture, along with presentation of a Pathfinder Leadership Award and Pathfinders Instructors Award, was held during church service. James Black spoke about the miracle of feeding the 5,000 with the loaves and fishes of the young boy, which he compared to being a Pathfinder.

On Sabbath afternoon a baptism was held, and 23 Pathfinders dedicated their lives to Jesus and His Church.

Sabbath vespers was held during a campfire program. After an appeal to accept the invitation to be called to serve, Pathfinders joyfully accepted.

The program then transitioned to “Called to Serve” for God and country. This was a special tribute to Desmond T. Doss, who received the Congressional Medal of Honor from President Harry S. Truman for his heroism in World War II. Les Rilea, civilian chaplain for the Southern Union, then presented a medallion coin to all the Pathfinder leaders who have served in the military. Medallions were also given to family members who had lost a family member while serving their country. Patriotic songs were highlighted by 17 minutes of fireworks. The program ended with a prayer of dedication to commit our lives to be “Called to Serve.”

Columbia's second annual car show event organized by John Earnhardt, pastor, and his enthusiastic church members.

While area car owners and cyclists show off their classics, church members have an opportunity to show community folks the church and school. The Pathfinder club brought out their "chuck wagon" to provide vegetarian hot dogs and burgers. A certified chef made everyone a special breakfast of omelets and pancakes. The proceeds went to the Columbia church school and Pathfinder club.

As people visited with one another or examined the unique cars and cycles, every 30 minutes there was a drawing for a large print Bible or Christian book.

Visitors also toured WBAJ, the popular Christian radio station located on the church grounds. "This annual event brings folks to our church that would probably never come for anything else," states Earnhardt. "It just makes it easier for them to return when we have our evangelistic events."

Attendees Relax at Hispanic Women's Retreat

A special weekend was held on September 28-30, 2007, for Carolina's Hispanic women. More than 250 arrived at Nosoca Pines Ranch to enjoy the retreat. The presentations by Lupita Aragon, from the Southeastern California Conference, were very uplifting.

The Sabbath afternoon "Tea Party" demonstrated an outreach tool to attract new interests to study the Bible. Three of the 30 visitors requested Bible studies. Each woman wrote a letter to God and nailed it to the cross. Then they carried the cross outside with tears in their eyes.

The evening brought a hat and scarf fashion show. The women made attractive and funny hats. Joyce from Greensboro won first place with her hat, "I won't starve." It was covered with all kinds of goodies—donuts, tea, cheese, and coins, just in case she ran out of food.

Nelly Alfonso from Raleigh commented, "This is one of the best women's retreats that we ever had."

Spartanburg Spanish Cuts Ribbon Ceremony

Just over a year after positioning the first stone, the Spartanburg Spanish church held an inauguration ceremony in its new church building on Sabbath, September 8, 2007. Church leaders and members were excited to cut the ribbon on its new church home.

In the early 90s, the late pastor, Bert Elkins, saw the need to start a Hispanic group in the Spartanburg area. The Oñates, Chávez, and Laboy families were among the first people to gather to worship there. Later, David Dobias, pastor, also wished to support the Hispanic work, inviting the group to meet in the Spartanburg Anglo church where he was pastoring.

When the Hispanic group grew to 40 people, they began worshipping in the Eddlemon Adventist School auditorium. A mission trip organized by the Spartanburg Anglo church to Simapan, Mexico, would influence some local Adventist families to migrate to the United States, adding to the group. A wave of members coming from Roanoke, N.C., also increased the numbers. In 2002, the group organized as a church under the leadership of Carlos Molina, pastor.

The Lord blessed a strong stewardship and fundraising program. Frank Montemat was elected as building committee leader. They found property at 3530 New Cut Road, close to Inman, S.C. The problem: it wasn't for sale. Finally, after much prayer, the Lord touched the hearts of the owners who sold the 12 acres of land for an incredibly low price.

Now, the more than 165 members belonging to the Spartanburg Spanish church are grateful to God for turning their dream into a reality.

Drum Corps Represents Church in Community

The All Nations Seventh-day Adventist Conquerors Drum Corps was named Florida State champion at the May 27, 2007, Pathfinder Red Zone during Florida camp meeting. This honored title became the door opener to numerous witnessing opportunities throughout the summer for the 19 drummers from St. Petersburg, Fla.

The springboard for ministry came when columnist Waveney Ann Moore wrote of their success in the St. Petersburg Times. An invitation to perform at the Bringe Music Center in St. Petersburg was accepted by Beryl Mitchell, Pathfinder director, after one of the Center's annual Saturday events was changed to Friday out of respect for the drum corps' observance of the Sabbath.

DARRELL EDWARDS

The State Champion All Nations Seventh-day Adventist Conquerors Drum Corps played their way into the hearts of audiences in the St. Petersburg, Fla., area this past summer.

As a result of this fancy sticking performance, the All Nations church group received a personal invitation from Muriel Whitman, Kenneth City mayor, to march in the city's 50th anniversary Fourth of July parade. For many, this exhibition of precision and discipline was an introduction to the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The crowd's enthusiastic cheers prompted expressions of thanks from the mayor to the pastor, Michael Reid, and his congregation, along with an invitation to march in next year's city parade.

The successful summer ministry, by God's favor and grace, ended when doors opened for the drum corps to play at the Westminster Retirement Community. The residents were awestruck at first sight of the pearl white drums as they braced for the earth-shaking sounds to follow. Even the few who covered their ears or gripped their seats cheered and praised the group at the performance's conclusion.

An impromptu question and answer forum followed where Darrell Edwards, associate Pathfinder director and drum corps director, provided an opportunity for the residents to learn about Pathfinders and the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

School Receives Grant for Playground Equipment

James E. Sampson Memorial School in Ft. Pierce, Fla., recently received a $50,000 grant to purchase new playground equipment.

Many hurdles were overcome in preparing the documentation for the grant. "There is much to tell of how God's direct intervention allowed this to come to pass," says Deborah Dahl, principal. "I just praise Him for His goodness to us." The school has been selected to apply for another grant during the present academic year.

School administrators chose the Orion product line manufactured by Play Mart. The Orion name prepared the way for students to learn about how the Holy City will descend from behind the middle star in Orion's belt. A plaque will be added to the equipment proclaiming God's glory and the significance of Orion.

Little Hometown Soldiers Spread Goodwill

Little Hometown Soldiers, based out of the St. Petersburg, Fla., church, is a group of children who minister to children of military parents serving their country. "Brightening their day while you're away," is the message these ambassadors of goodwill proclaim wherever they go.

Often, a mission will take them to nearby MacDill Air Force Base where their ministry puts them face to face with families. They also perform at veterans' hospitals and nursing homes, and show appreciation to those who went into harm's way to preserve a safe environment in which children can grow.

Recently, Little Hometown Soldiers participated in the funeral of a young father who gave all for his country. They extended comfort and support to four grieving children and their mother. Words of encouragement from these youngsters constantly touch the lives of those who serve in distant lands and their family members who remain at home.

A collage of heartfelt comments printed beneath colorful photos in their new book, An Open Window, include:

- "To all those who have suffered from the war, don't give up hope." —Ashley, 11
- "You are forever in our prayers." —Camry, 10
- "Thank you for defending our country." —Amanda, 10
- "Come home safe and sound." —Kelvin, 5

"At their early age, these children feel honored to learn the preciousness of sharing," says Elaine Hopkins, the group's founder and president. "They may not fully understand or agree to our presence in war, but they do know that God is still in control. We support our troops and their loved ones because, to God and these brave souls, we are grateful."

God in Shoes Brings Love

Sixty women and nine men representing women's ministries for the Conference traveled to Sneedville, Tenn., this September for a two-week God in Shoes event.

God in Shoes is a ministry especially for women, by women. The women travel to a chosen community, get to know the people, offer evening meetings with refreshments, and perform community service. In Sneedville, two houses were renovated, as well as another house in Rogersville. The group also hosted a "Take Time for Me Day," where they pampered the women with new shoes, haircuts, manicures, and massages.

"God wants us to be out there," says Jo Dubs, Conference women's ministries director, who began God in Shoes four years ago. "And, seeing every year how God works out the details, things just open up and evolve, it is a faith experience."

"All four years have inspired me," says women's ministries volunteer Frances McCarter. "It makes a better person of me, and I can do more than I think."

This year God in Shoes helped a women and her 50-year-old handicapped son by power washing, scraping and painting their home's exterior. In the home of a single young mom with two children, they placed underpinning on their trailer, fixed leaks in the roof, mounted mini blinds, and purchased bedding and sleepwear. In the home of an older woman and daughter, they set dry-wall on two interior rooms, replaced a ceiling, painted

In a newsletter by ARK, Sarah Gimbel, editor, shared that, due to the years of war and genocide in Burundi and Rwanda, many people fled to refugee camps in Tanzania. The United States government, in cooperation with the United Nations, has agreed to accept a number of these refugees. Seventy-eight families, who began arriving in 2006, will come to the Knoxville area.

Even though many of the refugees do not speak English yet, ARK takes time to get to know them through singing, teaching English songs, playing games and sports, reading the Bible, helping with transportation and translations.

“These families have a strong spirit to share in spite of the tragic circumstances they have lived in and among,” writes Gimbel. “Of course, they, like each of us, will continue to face hardships, but when we rally behind each other, our endurance increases.... The mission field is here.”

Lonnie Cook, who is the church’s Bible worker and also operates the church’s radio station, was the fourth person baptized

The church has about 58 members who attend services. The church is already paid for and was built by Alvin York, a World War I veteran famous as a conscientious objector and hero. York built the church for his brother, and the first person to be baptized in it was his niece.

Bass Students Help Start New Church

The Jesus First Adventist Fellowship, which is the name chosen for the new Wiggins, Miss., church group, was fully embraced as a ministry under the sponsorship of the Bass Memorial church this past April.

Wiggins is a small town with a population of 5,000 in the heartland of Stone County in southern Mississippi, and is the hometown of Drew Rester, an English teacher at Bass Memorial Academy. One of the focuses of BMA is getting students involved in ministry, hence, Rester had a dream. "I've always wanted an Adventist church in Wiggins. I also believe if we do not empower the youth to serve, they will either leave or transition into the next generation of pew warmers," Rester explains.

Rester and Steve Vicaro, Bass church pastor, began making plans. A call was made for volunteers, and 26 students responded. With the help of several families living in the Wiggins area, including Rester's parents, Wednesday night Bible study and church planning meetings began. The group desired a different approach to church planning, and from the beginning non-Adventists were invited to the planning meetings.

The student volunteers took part in a huge door-to-door project called the "Big Scary Weekend." The goal was to distribute literature to every home in the entire county. The students distributed more than 7,000 pieces of literature. They have developed important relationships with the citizens of Wiggins, and helped with worship services, personal evangelism, and community service programs. Another benefit has been the students' help in developing an upbeat, positive attitude and maintaining an energy level which fueled the new group's activities.

A building was purchased and renovated. The church group's mission is to be ambassadors for Christ, putting Him first by loving and praying for everyone in the community and teaching children about God's love. A children's church and Sabbath school program was held on the first Sabbath. Using round tables, the format of the adult services is that of a small group Bible study with a thematic approach, using the Bible as the source of all discussion.

Another group of students leads the activities for the children. After the singing of hymns, prayer time, and a wrap-up message by the pastor, everyone joins in a fellowship meal before the academy students head back to their campus.

students. However, when some in the community were rude to the students, she began to go with them, and she is now a courageous door-to-door witness herself.

At first Arinder's family was not happy about her involvement with the Adventists. Then, during one of their

This summer the work continued to move forward. In July evangelistic meetings began, and, to date, 17 have joined the Church by baptism or profession of faith. The goal of the church is to get everyone who joins involved in ministry. "We don't want to just play church," explained one of the newly baptized members who is already leading out in a Bible study class.

Breaking barriers of bias is a vital part of the ministry. As a new member Elizabeth Arinder began helping to take students door to door. At first she only agreed to drive the community service days, students from BMA came to their home and removed damaged sheet rock left from Hurricane Katrina. The parents were so impressed by the students that they still talk about them with their family and friends. The students have changed their opinion. Today they are proud that their daughter has found a wonderful new church family.

The church now has 31 members and is averaging more than 45 people in attendance each Sabbath.

Auction Raises Money for Nehemiah Project

The members of the Olive Branch, Miss., church have not let the building of its new church facility deter them from whole-heartedly supporting the Nehemiah Project. The Nehemiah Project is a 52-day campaign designed to help pay for the rebuilding of Bass Memorial Academy after Hurricane Katrina struck.

After a business meeting to select the brick for its new church, the members gathered in the fellowship hall to bid on cakes that were baked by the men of the church. Six hundred dollars was raised at the auction, which put the church more than $7,000 over its goal.

Micklewrights Celebrate 50th Anniversary

Ed and Katherine Micklewright celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Sabbath, August 11, 2007, with family, friends, faculty, and students of Bass Memorial Academy.

Ed and Katherine met in 1956 at Southern Missionary College and were married in Ft. Pierce, Fla., on August 13, 1957.

Thirty-five of their 50 years of marriage have been spent at Bass Academy. Katherine was the music director for more than 11 years and started the musical group known as Chelesta. During those years, Ed drove the "Basshound" bus and, though not a BMA staff member, he was actively involved with the Academy.

Their commitment for BMA and the Bass church continues today. Katherine plays the organ and piano for church services, while Ed can be found working behind the scene on the sound equipment and sanctuary lighting. He is also a member of the disaster response team, works with the American Red Cross, and served tirelessly after Hurricane Katrina with the recovery projects.

Ed and Katherine's 50 years of love and service to each other, their children, and their church is a quiet testimony to those who have been blessed by their example.

Lexington Church Welcomes New Pastor

John Bradshaw, pastor, and his family arrived in Lexington, Ky., in July, 2007, as the new pastor. Bradshaw's wife, Melissa; son, Jacob (7), and daughter, Shannon (4), made a family portrait complete. Bradshaw comments, "Lexington has a wonderful church family, a nice new church, and a wonderful three-teacher school. Lexington is a vibrant city, and we're going to have many opportunities as a church to reach the people who live here."

Bradshaw has a passion for soul-winning and training people to share their faith in Jesus Christ. He believes God is going to continue to do great things in Lexington.

Before Bradshaw was a Christian, he was successful in commercial radio, working as a breakfast show DJ. He hasn't forgotten his media background and has brought his broadcasting talents to ministry. He is the host of a radio program heard on Christian radio stations from coast to coast. He is also the "voice" of The Hope Channel, the official television network of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. He has been a guest speaker at camp meetings and other similar events.

Originally from New Zealand, Bradshaw has worked for the past 12 years as an evangelist with Amazing Facts. He and his wife, Melissa, have held public evangelistic meetings across the United States in cities such as New York, San Francisco, Dallas, St. Louis, Seattle, Sacramento, Nashville, and Fresno. "And now the Lord has led us to Lexington," Bradshaw says, "and our whole family couldn't be happier."

Tullahoma Member Turns 100

Grace Allen Scott turned 100 years old on July 27, 2007. Her wonderful spiritual journey began when she was 13 years old and her Sunday school gave her a memory verse card that got her attention. It stated: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy... The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God."

She went home and checked the kitchen calendar and found that Saturday was the seventh day. She couldn't help wonder why her family didn't go to church on Saturday, but Grace was not one to question her parents. For years she kept that secret in her heart and never forgot it.

After she was married she began her search to find a church that kept the Sabbath. It was many years before she attended a tent meeting and the minister spoke on the seventh-day Sabbath. At last she had found what she had been looking for all those years. She joined the Tullahoma, Tenn., church, and is now the oldest member.

Eventually her husband joined her in her faith. Her daughter, Kay, is married to John Fowler, who served the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference for many years as executive secretary.

The church celebrated Grace's birthday on July 22. She attributes her longevity to the fact that she has spent most of her life not worrying—truly great advice for everyone.

William James Taitano, 1955-2007

William (Bill) James Taitano was born August 8, 1955, and died September 2, 2007. Bill had been fighting cancer for the last several months.

Bill was born in Vito, Guam, where he grew up and attended grade school and high school. He served in the U.S. Army from March, 1975 to March, 1978. Following his military service, he attended Gulf Coast Community College and received an A.A. degree in 1980. He also attended Florida State University in Tallahassee, Fla. Bill started in the publishing work as a literature evangelist in the Florida Conference in July, 1981. He later became a district leader in Florida. While there, he met Cindy Hodges, and they were married July 22, 1984, in the Forest Lake church.

Before coming to the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference, Bill had also served as a district leader in the Georgia-Cumberland Conference. He was serving as a district leader in the Carolina Conference when he was invited to become the publishing director for the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference. He served as the publishing and public affairs and religious liberty director from June, 2006, until the time of his death.

While Bill took his work seriously, he also had a sense of humor. Bill was short, but loved to play basketball. He would say, "I can't wait to get to Heaven so I'll be tall enough to dunk a basketball." He was also an avid racquetball player.

Bill loved the Lord, his Church, and people in general. He had a passion for spreading the Gospel through literature and personal witnessing. He loved his family, the publishing ministry, and his fellow workers.

He is survived by his wife, Cindy; one daughter, Breanna; one son, Matthew; and his mother, Chong, who still lives in Guam.

Volunteers Help to Replace Murfreesboro's Roof

The temperature soared close to 100 degrees, but that didn't stop 40 volunteers who went to the Murfreesboro church on August 19, 2007, to replace a flat roof over the wing of the fellowship hall, where the kitchen, restrooms, Pathfinder room, and the community services office reside.

The flat roof was re-entitled, "The Sweet Fragrance of Love." Ann McGainey shared special remarks.

Her son, Junious Spann, gave her a dozen red roses, Berthina White gave her a dozen yellow roses, and all the members of Berea church signed a giant card. Two more of her children, Ethel Wright and Gladys Williams, joined in the celebration as well. A second celebration was held by her children the next day.

Mother McCoy, as some call her at Berea, was born to the late Mary Magdalene and Bungie Burns in 1900, in Sumter County, S.C. She was married to the late Israel Noah "Eddie" Spann in 1917, and to this union they were blessed with eight children: Sadie, Ethel, Birdie Maude, Corine, Junious, John, Mary Ruth, and Gladys. McCoy became a widow, married Ed Rose, and was blessed with two more children: Samuel Jerome and Franklin. She lost her husband Ed in an accident and married Oliver "Hooks" McCoy who passed in 1964.

State Honors Franklinton Member

Ann Turner, a member of Franklinton church, received the Award for Excellence for the North Carolina State Employees.

Not quite a decade ago, the Privette, Dunston, Wilson, and Person families of Franklinton and Louisburg, N.C., decided to share the light of the Gospel with their neighbors. To that end, a Branch of Zion was founded in Franklinton.

The Lord blessed the Franklinton church family with multifaceted gifts so that everyone in the Franklinton-Louisburg area could benefit from the light of truth.

Among those who joined the church family was Ann Turner, a retired septuagenarian accountant, who had relocated to Franklinton from New York with her husband. She lost no time in sharing her skills of finance with the church family. In time, she helped to develop what has now become a very efficiently operated finance department.

Turner took a temporary assignment at the North Carolina State University where she assisted students with the financing of their education. When the time arrived for her to leave, she was informed that she was too valuable to let go. She then became a permanent employee.

There were those who questioned her praying with students and parents over financial issues, and reported her for taking extra time to help needy students. Many were concerned because of what they considered to be her over zealous approach of caring for troubled young people. What they did not know was that Turner was letting her light shine so that others would receive the benefit of the truth, that God cares...even for students.

Ironically, when questioned about who should receive the Most Valuable Employee of the Office Award, those who criticized her actions the most, overwhelmingly voted that she should be the one to receive the honor. In addition to this recognition, Turner and 14 other individuals were selected from all of the state nominees to receive the Highest Award for Excellence because their service to the state of North Carolina represented outstanding performance. Personnel director Wright and Governor Easley stated that Turner "set an example for state employees everywhere." They applauded her for her "excellence in public service."

The faculty, staff, and students of North Carolina State University, as well as the surrounding communities, benefit from the light that Turner has allowed the Lord to shine through her.

Conference Members Work with Lockheed on Orion Space Project

Aerospace firm works with Lockheed on Orion project. For Infinity Technology, Inc., a contract to work with Lockheed Martin Space on the next-generation vehicle for human space flight is both a wonderful opportunity and a logical extension of the work that has come before the Orion project.

Infinity was founded in Huntsville in 1989 by Guy and Alicia Juzang, a husband-and-wife team who had been working for Digital Equipment Corporation and Dynetics before striking out on their own. Devout Christians, the Juzangs named the company with the aim of giving God the glory and set about working to build a company that could move into the aerospace and, ultimately, space fields. Infinity is described as an aerospace engineering, systems, software, and technical services company. The Orion project is charged with building a human space flight system to transfer astronauts to and from the International Space Station, the moon, Mars, and other destinations, according to Lockheed Martin.

Infinity, which established a successful relationship with Lockheed Martin for avionics software and other work it performed on the F-22 fighter jet, will provide engineering and fabrication for Orion's main engine simulators, solar ray simulators, propulsion tank simulators, some flight hardware mechanisms, and possibly software development and other services, said Guy Juzang, Infinity's president and CEO. The overall contract has three phases and runs 27 years.

Infinity employs 120 people today, with offices in eight states. During the past few years, revenue averaged nine to 10 million.

Guy Juzang said the company began by providing Monsanto in Decatur, with a system to allow it to scan all its safety documents. But then there were lean times, he said, that challenged the company's ability to survive. He said Alicia Juzang, the company's chairwoman, oversees operations. An Alabama native, she is extremely detail-oriented, which has been essential to the company's growth and success, Guy Juzang said.

Guy Juzang, a self-described "Air Force brat," who was born in Korea and grew up mostly in Albuquerque, N.M., has focused on business development. "Those real traumatic experiences that you go through, when you have success, it helps you understand why this had to happen before that did," he said.

The beginnings of the 1990s were a hard time for the company, but by 1993, it was providing work for the F-22, the most advanced jet fighter in the world. The company said it has worked with the U.S. Army, Air Force, and Lockheed Martin Aeronautics for 14 years, and has worked on operation flight program software for the Apache Longbow helicopter, the C-130, and other aircraft, including the F-15 and F-16 fighter jets.

Following a nomination from Lockheed Martin, Infinity was the Small Business Administration's subcontractor of the year in 2000. That relationship with Lockheed also helped spur the chance to do Orion work, Guy Juzang said.

"We moved from the ground, doing work with AMCOM – parts for tanks – then aerospace, with the F-22, which was another step toward Orion. In hindsight, what has been the end of the process was set at the beginning," Juzang said. "Each step was a building block."

Juzang said Infinity today has the best staff it's ever had, and the company is now pointing to the next phase, becoming a $20-million-a-year business."

Our story has been tough, but we keep getting some of them most enviable opportunities," Juzang said. "We always seem to get in on the beginning of something big."

Guy and Alicia are members of First church in Huntsville Ala. They have four children, three girls and one boy: Guielle, Patria, Marisa, and Deshon.

The Juzangs continue to give God the glory for their success. They look forward to the day, when man will travel from place to place in space without the need of today's technology.

Morningstar in Vicksburg Launches “Mission 66”

Morningstar church in Vicksburg, Miss., had the privilege of spearheading and inaugurating a new food ministry program in Vicksburg named “Mission 66.”

The food ministry is designed to target and serve meals to those in close proximity to the church. This service is provided on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. The longterm goal of the program is to provide meals Monday through Friday in the community. It is a partnership between Morningstar, Salvation Army (the meals are served at this facility), and Jackson Street Baptist church. Each of the aforementioned is currently providing meals for the community.

Mayor Laurence Leyens of Vicksburg is a staunch supporter of this ministry to the community and is actively seeking additional food and resources for the program.

The food ministry is the brainchild of Jonathan Smith, pastor, born out of his initial meeting with Leyens to introduce himself. Smith conveyed his philosophy, saying, “It is unrealistic for the people of Vicksburg to believe that our civic leaders can provide all the social services needed by the community.” This philosophy was well received by Leyens, and “Mission 66” was born.

Summer Institute Challenges Faculty in Online Instruction

In May, 2007, the UNCF/Mellon Faculty Programs at Spelman College granted the request made by the Oakwood College department of faculty development and research to host a teaching and learning institute from August 13-15, 2007. Subsequently, Oakwood was awarded $29,574 to facilitate the development of a summer institute that would focus on "Moving Beyond Face-to-Face Instruction to Blended and Online Instruction." Under the direction of Edith Fraser, Ph.D., director of faculty development and research at Oakwood College; Hannah Chambers; and Pamela Henry; more than 50 faculty members from other institutions were invited to attend the event on Oakwood's campus in Huntsville, Ala.

This summer institute provided an opportunity for faculty from various Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) to meet and share strategies and best practices aimed at strengthening the teaching and learning environment. The total of 43 faculty members who were in attendance included representatives from Fisk University, Miles College, Stillman College, Talladega College, Tuskegee University, and Alabama A & M University.

Some of the best national experts in distance learning were invited to present information for transforming traditional classroom instruction into online teaching. Among the presenters were faculty from Fielding Graduate University and Capella University, DePaul University of Chicago, and the Penn State: Rena Pallof, Keith Pratt, and Janossy and Stevie Rococo. These presenters taught the participants how to conduct an online course, and how to introduce and incorporate both blogging and podcasting as classroom learning tools. Participants were challenged to develop a short podcast for integration into one of their existing courses. In addition, they developed tools for both blended and hybrid courses. Each faculty member committed to incorporating these concepts into their teaching, sharing this information with their respective campuses, and developing a virtual network to enhance faculty collaboration.

Participants in the summer institute had only positive comments to share, ranging from, "This was the most organized conference I have been to," to "[We] congratulate you and your team on the excellent Mellon HBCU Institute you organized at Oakwood College. [We are] sure all attendees learned a lot and our students will benefit from the training we received."

Cynthia Spence, director of the Mellon-UNCF Summer Institute, remarked that she was impressed with the proposal and the well-designed institute. The tools offered to faculty will be instrumental in bridging the digital divide for students of color.

College President Well Suited for Occasion

President Delbert Baker takes his promissory dive into Oakwood's campus pool.

He promised that when enrollment numbers hit 1,800, he'd do something special to mark the occasion, but that wasn't enough for Delbert Baker, Oakwood College president. He wanted to really make a splash. So, when the fall enrollment numbers peaked at 1,824, Oakwood's chief administrator climbed the diving board at the campus natatorium and took a celebratory dive—in his three-piece suit and tie, no less! It was the fulfillment of a standing promise that is about seven years old, but there were those who had their doubts that Baker would actually take the plunge.

The celebrations began Tuesday morning, October 2, at the regularly scheduled student chapel, with a high-spirited student body, faculty, and staff gathering expectantly at the Oakwood campus church. Though usually well attended, the sanctuary was almost filled to capacity, replete with camera crews, photographers, and reporters from local news stations. A six-foot banner that read, "Congratulations, Oakwood College, on a record enrollment of over 1800," spanned the breadth of the platform behind program participants, and a lively praise team led song service with anticipative exuberance.

Baker congratulated the enrollment management team, directed by Jason McCracken, for a job well done, and thanked everyone for doing their part in bringing Oakwood to this eventful point.

It was just one week prior to this event that Oakwood College was cited in U.S. News & World

Report as a top-tier institution in the national rankings of the publication's newest guide to historically black colleges and universities (HBCUs), and received very positive press regarding its achievement. Oakwood occupies the 22nd slot, outperforming Alabama A &

M University, which came in at number 26 on the list of best HBCUs in America. Institutional ratings are based on SAT and ACT scores taken into consideration by ranking officials.

That same morning, Oakwood was also the first institution in northern Alabama to become the recipient of the Storm-Ready Supporter Award, a program sponsored by the Department of Public Safety and Transportation, directed by Chief Lewis Eakins. With all of this positive news surrounding the occasion, it's no wonder students packed the Natatorium, immediately following chapel, to witness the president's historic dive as he flawlessly executed his entry into more than 12 feet of water, fully clothed. Afterward, everyone was invited to the Oakwood Market Square for complimentary ice cream. Curious onlookers wanted to know two things—what the fate of that three-piece business suit would be, and whether or not it would be salvageable or trashed. Those answers lie in the hands of the cleaners, and the president might very well want to hold on to that suit for his promissory dive from the high board, forthcoming when enrollment hits 2,000.

Achieving Excellence

BY REBECCA BROOKS

A.W. Spalding Elementary School, located in Collegedale, Tennessee, is the first school in the Southern Union to receive the Adventist EDGE (Educators Delivering GREAT Education) School of Excellence award. The Southern Union Conference department of education presented this award to A.W. Spalding on October 2, 2007, at a special ceremony held in the Collegedale church. The School of Excellence award signifies that the school has satisfactorily completed the criteria outlined in the Southern Union Conference Adventist EDGE Handbook, and is now proclaimed as the first exemplary school among its 194 elementary school piers.

Requirements for this prestigious award reflect the investment, dedication, and commitment that it takes to actualize an educational program that exceeds the accreditation standards of the Adventist Accreditation Association (AAA), the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS), and the Council of International and Trans-regional Association (CITA). The criteria require a level of rigor in keeping with the true essence of excellence.

The A.W. Spalding validation visit was based on the Adventist EDGE Comprehensive School Improvement Initiative. The team that visited A.W. Spalding based their validation on the acronym "GREAT" and specifically identified where excellence had been achieved in the following areas:

- G – God-centered,
- R – results-oriented, in an
- E – environment that is safe and nurturing,
- A – aligned with Adventist and national standards; and a
- T – team effort.

A.W. Spalding has adopted best practices that emphasize the Natural cycle of learning and differentiated instruction. Teachers deliver GREAT education with a variety of learning styles in mind, making sure that students are motivated at every level and in all areas of study. A. W. Spalding has given special attention to improving how the institution meets students' individual needs, according to Murray Cooper, principal.

"I am pleased that A.W. Spalding is the first school to achieve the full award designation. It is a testament to the teamwork between students, parents, and teachers in this school," says Cooper. "It is an opportunity to step back and praise the Lord for the blessings and the gifts He has bestowed on us and our constituency."

Along with the Adventist EDGE School of Excellence award, A.W. Spalding also received a custom-designed school of excellence flag and a check for $18,000 from the Southern Union Conference Adventist EDGE "SMART" (Schools Making a Real Transformation) Fund. According to Cooper, the money will be used for continued staff development, to purchase three active boards with electronic pens, and other school projects.

"It is an important milestone for Spalding Elementary, Georgia-Cumberland Conference, and the entire

Southern Union," says Cynthia Gettys, Ph.D., Conference vice president for education.

"The Adventist EDGE is Southern Union's response to the North American Division's Journey to Excellence, a document that calls for changes and improvements in Adventist education and in schools for the 21st century. The Adventist EDGE," explains Conrad Gill, director of education for the Southern Union Conference, "calls for exemplary schools in all categories. It is the Southern Union's comprehensive school improvement plan designed to implement the Journey to Excellence. Our teachers, schools, and conferences have to be intentional to ensure that Adventist education in the Southern Union is the best available product in the communities we serve. We know and clearly understand that 'Excellence is never achieved by accident.' It takes hard work, along with much prayer."

Southern Celebrates Continued Growth

Enrollment at Southern Adventist University is at a record high for the eighth year in a row. This marks the twelfth consecutive year of continuous growth. The total number of students enrolled for fall 2007 is 2,640—47 students more than fall 2006, and 1,049 more students than fall 1995. Freshman headcount is at 535.

Since 1995, Southern has added graduate programs, incorporated a School of Visual Art and Design, opened a new science building, added distance learning, and expanded student housing. Under construction is the wellness center expansion and a new nursing building.

“In spite of growth, we intentionally maintain a learning environment based on networking, small groups, and personal interaction with professors,” says Vinita Sauder, vice president for marketing and enrollment services. “We never want to lose our personal touch. Students find a unique faith environment here that is distinctively different from the larger public universities and colleges. It’s what makes us very special.”

Students Get Plugged In at Ministries Expo

Southern’s student body spent an evening after vespers on September 7, learning about and joining many of Southern’s ministries during the eighth annual Ministries Expo.

More than 30 booths

featuring ministries such as literature evangelism, small groups, Bible work, and Christian drama, were set up outdoors near the Collegedale church.

Jesus but for them to experience Christ themselves,” says Kevin Kibble, assistant chaplain.

Senior business major Taylor Paris says the event was a wonderful chance for students to continue their spiritual growth outside the classroom.

“It gives us the opportunity to see what’s out there,” Paris says. “To get plugged in and make a difference on campus, in the area, and around the world.”

Children Graduate from KidZone Bible Guides

Emmaus Elementary School students, Columbus, Miss.

Jacksonville, Fla., First church students

Three youngsters from Tennessee were the first Southern Union graduates from the Voice of Prophecy's new KidZone Bible Guides: Terry Hampton of Afton, Zack Barnett of Sevierville, and Juliana Castellaw of Dyersburg.

Locally operated Discover Bible Schools have enrolled many in KidZone. One of the most active schools is at the Jacksonville First church, where Evelyn Exson is the coordinator. As each student completes the guides, a diploma is presented during a worship service. Six have already graduated from KidZone, and more are studying.

Eleven students at the Emmaus Elementary School in Columbus, Miss., enrolled, studied, and graduated together.

Ten-year-old Stephen John Jordan, who attends the Athens, Ga., church, says he enjoyed learning more about God. "That helps me to change my life. I started listening more at church."

KidZone presents doctrines with stories and illustrations that junior-age youth enjoy, and is designed to be used by vacation Bible schools, baptismal classes, and elementary schools, as well as for sharing door-to-door.

Topics for the 14 lessons include creation, the fall, salvation, baptism, prayer, the Ten Commandments, the Sabbath, health, death, the second coming, and Heaven.

Every guide includes an appeal to accept Jesus.

Besides a response sheet to be returned to an instructor, each lesson also features an activities page with games, puzzles, and other fun things to do.

KidZone is free to children in the U.S. and Canada as a correspondence course. Children worldwide will be able to read the guides online when a new VOP website, kidsvop.com, launches early next year. The website will also have additional activities for kids that are not included in the lessons.

Mission Accomplished

BY SARA BERNAL

Two hundred student missionaries consecrated their time this summer to work as literature evangelists. For more than two months, students from various Adventist academies and colleges joined the 10 canvassing programs throughout the Southern Union, taking the message of salvation door to door to thousands of people.

More than 200,000 books, including Steps to Christ and The Great Controversy, were distributed to 1.2 million doors, generating 3,000 Bible studies given by students and church members. The mission culminated with evangelistic crusades in some of the states and 30 individuals were baptized.

ences and to appreciate the efforts of the students and publishing directors.

This year, the students also paid a special tribute in memory of Hailu Kidanamerian, an Ethiopian student from Antillean Adventist University in Puerto Rico, who died after he was struck by lightning while canvassing in Miami, Florida. Hailu was honored and remembered through recent photographs, and in the words of Les McCoy, youth publishing director of the Florida Conference: "Hailu lived a life of service, and our hearts will not forget his sacrifice." Many students shed tears as they remembered the example of love shown by a student who, in 45 days, had touched so many lives.

Before the start of each program, 30 student leaders in the Union gathered at Atlanta Belvedere church in Decatur, Georgia, for an annual week of intense training, covering such areas as inventory, finances, organization, and territory. Six Bible workers met at the same place to train and prepare spiritually to teach the Gospel to others. For three days, they fasted in anticipation of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit and His blessings.

When asked about goals for next summer, Rocky Davis, youth publishing director for the Southern Union, said the plan is "to raise our program standards higher, do one-on-one mentoring to students on the field, and be more involved with evangelism." This year, the summer and winter programs, including the MagaBook industry of the Southern Union, will have added up to more than $1,000,000 through the sale and distribution of Christian literature.

As a result, four people in Georgia surrendered their lives to God after the evangelistic series presented by Esteban Hidalgo, the official Bible worker for the Atlanta territory. After a three-week series in Bible prophecy presented by several Bible workers in Louisville, Kentucky, 17 individuals were baptized. Another 600 continue receiving Bible studies throughout the Union.

The students celebrated a successful 10-week program at their annual end of summer retreat at Nosoca Pines Ranch, in Liberty Hill, South Carolina. They had the opportunity to share outstanding experiences and to appreciate the efforts of the students and publishing directors.

Sara Bernal, junior broadcast journalism student at Southern Adventist University, toured with the literature evangelists in five states during the summer, photographing, writing articles, shooting video, and interviewing students.

Esteban Hidalgo, Bible worker for the Atlanta program, also canvassed to generate more Bible studies.

Satellite Viewers Witness 243 Baptisms

BY ABEL PAULÍN

An interactive and simultaneous baptismal ceremony on April 21, 2007, saw 243 individuals baptized in several Florida churches at the close of the satellite uplinked Florida NET 2007 evangelistic campaign, “Confirmando la Fe de Jesús” (Affirming the Faith of Jesus).

More than 500 total baptisms in Florida resulted from the April 14-21, 2007, series presented by Rolando de los Ríos, Conference Hispanic evangelist. It was broadcast from the Forest City Spanish church and downlinked throughout North America and parts of South America and Africa.

Three months prior to the satellite campaign, ministers and laypeople in 444 small groups among 52 churches began studying the Bible course, The Faith of Jesus. Two hundred and fifty individuals were baptized during these preliminary meetings.

“The night I was presenting the message ‘See It to Believe It,’ I expressed my conviction that we should trust Jesus no matter what the circumstances,” says de los Ríos. “However, no one in attendance knew that I was experiencing that faith in my own soul.”

De los Ríos, a former heart bypass surgery recipient, had been stricken that morning with a burning pain in his chest and shortness of breath. He knew if he gave in and went to the hospital, the evangelistic campaign would be disrupted. Instead, he petitioned the Lord to take away his symptoms until the series was completed, and then he would go to the hospital.

Pastor de los Ríos’ prayer was granted, and he was without pain until Sunday afternoon after the campaign. He then went to the hospital, was diagnosed with a heart attack, and had to undergo a catheterization.

“With God’s help, it is my purpose to continue ministering for Him as long as He so desires it,” says the veteran evangelist and radio preacher, “and I am completely assured that the God in whom we trust will sustain us until the end.”

When Jesus arrived at Bethsaida, the people brought a blind man to Him, begging Him to touch him.

Jesus took the man by the hand and led him from the village.

After touching him once, the man began to see.

He touched him again, and his vision became clear.

— MARK 8:22-25 —

When Jesus was on Earth, the blind, the deaf, the paralyzed found comfort and renewal in His outstretched hand, regardless of means or status. He established a ministry centered on the spiritual, emotional and physical needs of people who were desperate for a healing touch.

With Christ as our example, Adventist Health System employees and physicians reach out to touch the hearts and heal the lives of more than 4 million patients each year. We pray that the compassion of His hand will be felt in the touch of ours.
