One of the Best Sermons I’ve Seen

It was a second grade community service class assignment and our son Tim was excited. He had adopted a grandparent at the nursing home and instantly found a soul mate. Clyde was in his 90’s and whenever Tim would come by to visit him, Clyde recited ancient boyhood history with stories that went back before airplanes and cars and Nintendo. Tim loved Clyde. He even made cookies with a little help from his mother to help celebrate Clyde’s birthday. He reported to the family that he and Clyde sat on the bed and almost finished off two-dozen chocolate chip cookies that afternoon, noting that he wasn’t sure how much longer Clyde would live so they had to eat them right away.

I was curious about Tim’s newfound friend, so at Christmastime our family visited the nursing home and looked forward to singing and praying with Clyde. Tim led us down the hallway to Clyde’s room, and as we turned into the semi-private quarters I immediately noticed a gentleman seated next to the door and, assuming it was Clyde, introduced myself. Tim was already on the other side of the room sitting with the real Clyde on his bed. This is not easy to admit, but the truth is I was drawn to Clyde’s roommate because he seemed more like me. It was an instantaneous judgment. In a flash my mind categorized these two men based on outward appearance. Clyde’s roommate was clean, dressed sharply, and his side of the room was organized. On the other hand Clyde was a mess, and, sorry to say, my mind quickly formulated a “cleanliness is next to Godliness seminar” for my wayward son as soon as our little visit was over.

It was impossible for me to comprehend that given a choice; my son would opt to adopt the slovenly old man. Where had we failed? Tim was oblivious and proudly introduced Clyde to his family. Couldn’t he see that Clyde needed to brush his teeth? Didn’t he notice that Clyde’s shirt had drool and last week’s dinner on it? Now, we all believe hygiene is important. And, keeping things clean is a very good idea. I am not depreciating the important role parents have in helping our children keep themselves and their rooms clean. What I had missed was that just because an old man was disheveled was not a reason to judge him less of a human worthy of love than the non-disheveled. How could a preacher miss that?

Since we had planned to sing and pray, I dutifully went through the motions now, feeling a little more pressed for time and anxious to get in the car and quiz my son on his choice of nursing home grandparents. When I finished praying the unbelievable unfolded. Little Tim wrapped his chubby arms around Clyde as they sat on his bed; then, before my very eyes, he gave Clyde a big kiss right on the lips. The Holy Spirit grabbed me and I knew my son was the preacher and I was the disciple. It’s one of the best sermons I’ve ever seen. I’ve never been quite the same since.

My God looks not on the outward appearance, but on the heart.

“Good News Atlanta”
Builds Momentum for General Conference 2010
BY TAMARA WOLCOTT FISHER
The Georgia-Cumberland and South Atlantic conferences are working together in practical ways to share Christ’s love with the more than 5 million people living in the metro Atlanta area.

Recently, 285 church members from the two conferences worked together to build a Habitat for Humanity home in Atlanta. Each Sunday for seven weeks, volunteers met to raise the walls, hang sheet rock, paint, and put the finishing touches to the house. On the final Sunday, Ed Wright, president of Georgia-Cumberland, and Vanard J. Mend- inghall, president of South Atlantic, met to help present the home to Angela Kendrick, a deserving single mother of three daughters.

“One of the most rewarding things about ‘Good News Atlanta,’” according to Bill Winston, executive secretary of South Atlantic, “It has forged a strong bond with our sister conference, Georgia Cumberland. We worked together in cooperation with Habit for Humanity and built a beautiful home for a deserving family. What a joyful and rewarding experience that turned out to be!”

Good News Atlanta was founded in 2005 by churches from both conferences joining forces to meet the challenge of reaching the more than five million people living in the metro Atlanta area. With only 12.4 percent of this population attending church, the harvest is ripe but the laborers are few (Matthew 9:37).

“A disturbing set of figures shows that more than 450 new people move into Atlanta every single day, 365 days a year,” says Bill Levin, director of Good News Atlanta, church planting, and global missions for Georgia-Cumberland.

“Last year, Georgia-Cumberland baptized 1,171 individuals. While I praise God for these people who have given their hearts to Christ, I had to come to terms with this other figure. In any given three-day period, more people move into the Atlanta metropolitan area than all the people who were baptized in all of Georgia-Cumberland during 2007. Frightening!”

“We have already experienced many blessings as I have worked with leaders and members from both conferences, such as working side by side on the Habitat house with complete unity to show God’s love,” says Chris Donovan, global evangelism, and church planting assistant for Good News Atlanta. “For me, Good News Atlanta means participating in a ‘new’ evangelistic work that incorporates and models revolutionary steps which will help our Church return to the soul-winning results we had when we began. The biggest challenge I think we face is limiting God by allowing our fears to paralyze us, so we become unwilling to risk everything for the sake of a lost world.”

Members and leaders from the two conferences share other exciting activities associated with Good News Atlanta.

Georgia-Cumberland’s Initiatives

Church Planting

“Two days after Christmas, my family and I moved into an apartment complex in the most crime-infested area in Atlanta,” says Rustin Sweeney, Good News Atlanta community life coordinator. Sweeney and his wife, Stacy, intend to plant a church at their new apartment home. They have a deep interest in intentional community as described in Acts 2 and 4, opening their home to be a place of hospitality. It is estimated that 95 percent of people who live in apartment complexes don’t attend church.

“After visiting over 60 apartment communities, we felt that God led us to the one He wanted. After only six days in our new apartment, our Jeep and other items were stolen, but God turned it into a blessing.” Here is Sweeney’s follow up email:

“Just wanted to praise God… Our Jeep was found and we were able to get it from impound tonight. I had asked God to somehow show my wife that, despite the things going on, He was in charge and protecting us. The $40 in quarters for laundry and the new stereo were still in the car… and we are closer to Christ now than at the beginning of the day! … When we got home tonight a bunch of guys were sitting in the gazebo, so my son and I went over and invited them all to Friday night dinner (and hopefully an encounter with the Father!).”

Reaching Postmoderns

Rhoda Lapp, postmodern coordinator for Good News Atlanta says, “Postmodern ministry helps Seventh-day Adventists build relationships with people of today’s generation by sharing key elements in lifestyle, philosophy, and approach to the postmodern mind. A postmodern ministry is also very attractive to our young people who are interested in exploring alternative ways of connecting people to church life.” LIFEdvelopment is a ministry specifically to postmoderns, primarily young people of today’s culture, by being involved in building authentic friendships with unchurched, secular people, and in the process, lead them to Jesus, and provide them hope through support and nurture.

Fusion Sponsors Weekly Prayer Walks

“Weekly prayer walking in downtown Atlanta, Fusion, one example of postmodern ministry, goes out in search for lost souls on the streets. For the past eight months, this group has grown as a ‘Search and Rescue’ endeavor,” says Chris Bullock, pastor of the new church plant, Fusion. “Relationships have been formed with street, business, and residential dwellers. Drug addicts, the homeless, and prostitutes are valued as children of God. Homes have been entered. Worship takes place on street corners. Fusion believers know they are the Church, not a building. They take church to where life happens.”

Carrying Good News to Muslims

“As the Adventist Muslim relations person for The Quiet Hour, and one of the main educators for the North American Division Adventist Muslim Relations Center, yet living close to Atlanta, I am excited to share a picture of God’s love that includes Adventists being loving and lovable people and actually befriending Muslims,” says Bryan Gallant, assistant for Muslim relations, Good News Atlanta. “Within the scope of the Good News Atlanta team, my work is trying to help local Adventists learn how to share that picture of God in the most effective way so that individual Muslims can hear it and be blessed by it.” If you think the Three Angels’ Messages includes the mandate to share with EVERY people group, including Muslims, then maybe you should have a training program at your church or study group.

Doing Greenhouse Ministry in Crystal Cove

A cornerstone of Good News Atlanta is the little community of Crystal Cove, Georgia, approximately 35 miles north along Lake Lanier. Good News Atlanta assistant Jan Levin says, “Several years ago, Bill and I were compelled to put the ‘Greenhouse’ (see sidebar) principles to the test. Using its simple principles, we prayed for God’s leading and entered a community (Crystal ‘Meth’ Cove), where we did not know anyone, or have any connections. We have since been meeting every Friday evening with more than 30 people from this troubled community. There are currently five older teenagers attending a baptism class every Monday night, and several ‘Life Transformation’ groups going. God is working, doors have been opened, and life transformation is taking place.”

South Atlantic’s Initiatives

There is “Good News” for Atlanta from the South Atlantic Conference as well. In anticipation of General Conference 2010, and of the soon return of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, several initiatives have gained spiritual traction during 2007. Positive results give testimony to the power and goodness of God.

Under the leading of the Holy Spirit and the dedicated efforts of pastors and laity, evangelistic efforts added more than 600 individuals to metro Atlanta in 2007. In addition, new congregations were planted and organized in Acworth, Adairsville, Lawrenceville, Roswell, and Stone Mountain.

Women’s ministries raised more than $7,000 last year, which will be used for an “extreme home makeover” to bless some family with much needed repairs and upgrades. Disability ministries kicked into high gear plans to make each worship facility accessible for all who are physically challenged, and to provide interpreters for the hearing impaired at each of our services.

Southern Union Women’s Conference
Nearly 2,000 women who will attend the Southern Union Women’s Conference, September 4-7, 2008, will help carry the good news to Atlanta. Hundreds of women will share Christ’s love by getting involved in practical projects around the city.

Bill Winston says, “As God intended, working together we can help hasten the day when Jesus will break through the clouds to take us to our Heavenly home. And that, my friend, is the best news of all!”

Called to Community: Adventist Health System Hosts 18th Annual Conference on Mission

More than 200 delegates attended Adventist Health System’s 18th annual Conference on Mission, held February 28 through March 1 in Lake Mary, Fla. Delegates to the conference included leaders from Adventist Health System facilities, as well as representatives from Seventh-day Adventist churches, conferences, and colleges.

The conference centered on the theme of “Doing Good and Doing Well.”

“Mission is the core of our existence, and we take the responsibility of enhancing mission very seriously,” said Donald Jernigan, Ph.D., president and CEO of Adventist Health System.

A highlight of the opening session was the inaugural Benjamin F. Reaves, D.Min., keynote address, designated to honor Reaves, vice president of ministries, for his contributions in fostering a culture of mission within Adventist Health System. Monica Reed, M.D., CEO of Florida Hospital Celebration Health, delivered the address. Reed shared examples of how the whole-person “Creation Health” message is being woven into the fabric of Adventist healthcare.

“Jesus’ approach to healthcare was holistic and revolutionary,” said Reed. “Jesus calls us to a level of social responsibility that is creative and groundbreaking.”

In the annual awards ceremony, several individuals were honored for their dedication to extending the healing ministry of Christ.

Adventist Health System’s Crystal Angel Award was developed to recognize outstanding leadership in specific mission-related achievements, as well as overall spiritual leadership. This year, Crystal Angels were presented to Gary Jepson from Central Texas Medical Center, San Marcos, Texas, and Carlyle Walton from Takoma Regional Hospital, Greeneville, Tenn.

In recognition of their compassionate service to others, two individuals were honored with the Adventist Health System Christian Service Award. The recipients this year were Leroy Otter from Shawnee Mission Medical Center, Shawnee Mission, Kan., and Linda Lynch from Florida Hospital, Orlando, Fla.

In acknowledgment of the positive impact they have had on improving the quality of life in their community, Sher Fox from Hinsdale Hospital, Hinsdale, Ill., and Shauna Ferguson from Shawnee Mission Medical Center received the Adventist Health System Community Service Award.

Sabbath’s worship services included a message from Karl Haffner, Ph.D., D.Min., as well as musical performances by Jennifer LaMountain and Rudy Micelli.

This annual conference is a time to refocus and reaffirm our mission. I am proud to be part of our worldwide Church family that is serious about extending the healing ministry of Christ. With God’s blessing, we can make a difference as we join Him in His work.”

It began as any short-term mission trip would, but by the end this mission team would see the powerful impact of the Seventh-day Adventist message. A group of 42 people, 15 of them from the Georgia-Cumberland Conference, were preparing to hold evangelistic meetings in India, January 17-February 20. Sponsored by The Quiet Hour and ShareHim, they would preach at 29 sites centering around the cities of Vellore and Tiruvannamalai in the southern part of India.

According to Mitch Hazekamp, Conference trust services director, as the meetings began, the missionaries were able to present health lectures each night, pray and study with the local villagers, and share the Adventist message. The people were interested and many requested baptism at each site, even though choosing to become Christians could negatively impact their status in the community, and possibly even endanger them. “I really felt welcomed and accepted by the local village I was working in,” says Mickey Bankhead, Conference information technology services director, who was a presenter in a village near Vellore. “One person told us we were not going to be permitted to continue our meetings. However, the local Bible worker and conference officials worked with the village elders, and the village elders pledged their support for our meetings. One of the elders attended every night. Each night saw an increase in attendance.”

The good response continued for 13 nights of the 16-night series — then the news came. Near Tiruvannamalai, radical Hindu leaders were upset with the response to the meetings. They had begun inciting mobs and wanted the missionaries arrested. Four of the missionaries who had been preaching in the area were held by police for questioning.

The mission team in Vellore heard about the disturbance, and the local Adventist conference leaders advised them to leave their hotel during the middle of the night. At around 3 a.m. the missionaries packed their bags and boarded three buses for Hosur and the Adventist headquarters, where they spent the night.

The group from Tiruvannamalai also boarded buses and had a police escort to Hosur. The police then advised them to immediately cross the border into the next state.

According to a report from Bill Tucker of The Quiet Hour, even though the meetings were cut short, 1,200 people have been baptized so far in Vellore and Tiruvannamalai.

In spite of all that happened, shares Hazekamp, “many people responded to the messages of God’s Word, and much seed was sown.”

To help cultivate the villagers’ interest and knowledge of God’s Word, The Quiet Hour has provided training and funding for local Bible workers to continue with follow-up studies in each of the villages for three to five years.
It was just over one year ago when Robert Folkenberg Sr., ShareHim director, approached the Carolina Conference communication department about producing a television show for ShareHim. As this evangelistic ministry was expanding, more and more people wanted to get involved with ShareHim and learn what happens during the many evangelism campaigns held around the world.

Within a few months the first episodes of ShareHim TV Newsmagazine were recorded with hosts Robert Folkenberg Jr. and his wife, Audrey. Soon, the new television show was on its way to Illinois to be aired on the Three Angels Broadcasting Network.

The 30-minute program features interviews and reports from some of ShareHim’s most enthusiastic evangelists. Each week viewers are invited to visit global locations and hear volunteers share their thrilling experiences.

All of the post-production and editing takes place in the Carolina Conference communication department, as well as script development and production scheduling. Until recently, the portion of the program featuring the Folkenbergs was shot at LifeTalk Studios in Collegedale, Tenn., but the program now has a new home at ShareHim Studios, with a set custom-designed and built for ShareHim at the Carolina Conference office.

Tune in to the program on Sabbath at 12 a.m., or Sunday at 8:30 a.m., Eastern time. Also, log onto the 3ABN website and view the program from there. Past episodes are available at any time by going to the ShareHim website at www.sharehim.org.

Swahili-Speaking Church Organized in Raleigh

The Swahili-speaking congregation in Raleigh, N.C., is now officially a church of the Carolina Conference. The new church of 120 members appropriately called themselves the “Umoja” church — Umoja is a Swahili word which means unity.

Gary Moyer, Conference secretary, encouraged the group to continue reaching out to the community. “At the rate they are growing,” Moyer mentioned, “it won’t be long and they’ll realize their goal of a 500-member church.”

The group began meeting back in February 2006. The worshipers knew of an African pastor who they hoped could help them grow and establish a church. In June 2006 they called Enock Omosa, an Adventist minister from Kenya who had moved to the United States to escape the political problems in his home country.

After arriving in Raleigh, Omosa reached out to various African associations in the Raleigh area. As a result of this, the membership grew. On September 30, 2006, Moyer had the honor of organizing the East African worshipers as an official company of the Conference. That same day there was a baptism where 53 people joined the church.

The five-year goal for this rapidly growing church is to acquire a church building that will care for the 500 members they plan to have. At the rate these worshipers are growing, and with the Lord’s continued blessing, they will most likely meet and perhaps exceed their goal.

“Locks of Love” Given at Asheville North

It is estimated that 80 percent of all hair donations come from children who wish to help other children. Chelsea Campbell, 13, of Asheville, N.C., North Church is one of those.

Chelsea chose February, the “love” month, to stand before her church congregation and have her 10-inch ponytail cut off, bagged, and mailed to Locks of Love.

Locks of Love is a non-profit organization committed to providing the highest quality hairpieces to every financially disadvantaged child suffering from long-term or permanent medical hair loss, usually due to alopecia, cancer, or medical trauma. Each hairpiece retails between $3,500 and $6,000. While children under age six would outgrow their hairpiece too rapidly, those between ages six and 18 are eligible.

A plastic custom-fitted cap is made from a plaster cast mold of the recipient’s head. The hair prostheses are crafted from donated hair, each requiring between six and 10 ponytails no shorter than 10 inches. Up to 150,000 strands of hair are hand injected into the silicone base. Individual styling allows the child to compliment their own facial features.

Because of the vacuum seal formed by the custom cap, no tape or glue is required. They can even swim and shower with it. This sense of security allows the child to regain self-confidence and be a kid again.

Much deserved applause, and a new shorter haircut, went to Chelsea for her unselfish act to help other children in need.

Homecoming in Columbia

A variety of festivities were planned for the day, including a time to relax and reminisce, an afternoon musical program, and a picture party with memories of past years.

Homecoming 2008 at Columbia allowed a peek into the future heavenly reunion.

The Plantation Church’s HOPE Ministry Team (Helping Oppressed People Every day) prepared to feed 100 homeless people on December 25, 2007, with 160 hot dogs, 106 buns, 100 bottles of water, 100 snacks, 24 homemade muffins, and orange slices. Jessie Guillaume, the director, also brought a cash gift of $5 for each person.

Imagine the team’s surprise to find nearly 300 people waiting for their Christmas meal. Some of the homeless had slept in the parking lot in order to be first in line. It seemed inevitable that many would not be fed, so volunteers gathered to pray for a miracle.

The tables were set up, the blessing was offered, and the volunteers began to serve the food. Even though each person was served one hot dog with a bun, one bottle of water, one snack, a piece of muffin, and three orange slices, there was still food left over. Every homeless person received one $5 bill, and the director still had $135 in her pocket at the end of the day.

Members of the HOPE team truly believe God answered their prayers to accomplish His purpose on Earth and multiplied the food as He had done with the five loaves and two fishes.

Senior Class Touches Young Lives

The Forest Lake Academy senior class touched young lives from several Orlando-area children’s homes through their class play, “The Boy Who Wouldn’t Grow Up: The Adventures of Peter Pan.” The children were invited to attend the Sunday matinee performance and a cast party in the cafeteria afterwards to interact with the student characters. “It was a great opportunity for our class to make new connections with the community,” said Anthony Bosman, senior class president.

Umatilla Church Breaks Ground

More than 100 people attended groundbreaking ceremonies for the Umatilla Church on February 3, 2008. The proposed church site is located on 6.4 acres on Highway 19. Participants included Roy Chang, M.D., (left), treasurer; Edith Tokics, personal ministries leader; Jim King, former pastor; Bonita Dixon, mayor of Umatilla; Scott Dambrose, building committee chairman; Jim Appel, pastor; and Noel Shanko, assistant to the president of Florida Conference.

Brazilian Chapel, Pompano Beach—A new Adventurer Club was started February 2007, under the leadership of Cleandro Viana, director, and Lislene Moura and Valderis Davis, associate directors. The Bears P.A.W. was chosen as the name for the Club, because the bear, one of God’s creatures, has Power, Ability, and Wisdom. One unique feature at club meetings comes in hearing the lessons taught in both English and Portuguese.

Avon Park—Aristarco and Elizabeth Martinez celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on December 28, 2007.

Silver Springs Shores—Happy Fingers presented its seventh annual piano recital under the direction of Evelyn Powell, who moved to the Ocala, Fla., area from New York City where she was director of a children’s choir. Recognizing the need for young people to be involved in the worship service, she started the Happy Fingers program, which continues in Ocala, where piano students participate in the worship service each week by taking turns playing for the children’s story time.

Avon Park—Seminars on health and the Sabbath were conducted by father and daughter team Samuele and Loretta Bacchiocchi. Loretta Bacchiocchi, an instructor at Florida Hospital School of Nursing, lectured on CREATION health, an acronym for the eight basic health principles: Choice, Rest, Environment, Activity, Trust, Interpersonal, Outlook, and Nutrition. Samuele Bacchiocchi, a noted author, presented seminars on the Sabbath. Music was given by Cristina Piccardi, a student at Andrews University, who left the opera world to sing Christian music.

Fort Lauderdale—Jeffrey Thompson, senior pastor, put on his work clothes and joined the men’s ministries team, under the direction of Jay Francis, in a “Flower Planting Day” to beautify the grounds surrounding the church. The men donated funds for the flowers, shrubs, soil, fertilizer, and mulch that were purchased for the project. Sonia Francis, head deaconess, led a team of women in the preparation of a buffet lunch for the men.

Winter Springs—Sale of the church property at the Moss Road campus necessitated a search for a suitable rental location that was found in a church facility owned by The Master’s Touch International, 555 Markham Woods Road, Longwood.

Two years ago, the Seminole Meadows Church on Ronald Reagan Boulevard in Sanford merged with the Winter Springs Church. The combined church membership anticipates being in its new facility in Sanford in two years.
Students Perform at Hand Bell and Strings Festival

Students who play string instruments, hand bells, and chimes came together Feb. 8-9, 2008, for the Georgia-Cumberland Conference Festival for Hand Bells/Chimes and String Orchestra. Approximately 120 students in grades 5-10 met at Georgia-Cumberland Academy in Calhoun, Ga., for the event. Lettie Mae Bragg conducted the bells, and Rhonda Burnham conducted the strings.

While a bells festival has been held in the past, this year marked the first time a strings festival has been held at Georgia-Cumberland Academy.

Doctor Honored for Service

Dalton, Ga., Church member Joy Nwadike, M.D., practices obstetrics and gynecology in the northwest Georgia city of Chatsworth. She is one of four recent recipients of the Davies Health Technology Award for 2007 in the State of Georgia. Sponsored by the Physicians’ Institute for Excellence in Medicine, the candidates are chosen from primary and specialty care physicians across Georgia and given to doctors who implement technology solutions in their practice.

Nwadike runs the Immanuel Women’s Center in Chatsworth and was also recently chosen by Wachovia Bank for the Dalton, Ga., “Resident of the Week.”

“It’s an honor for the center,” said patient Freda. “Dr. Nwadike is not only dedicated to her work, but it’s the personal care that makes it so special. She’s really dedicated to people. When I was faced with a serious unexpected problem, I was apprehensive. She led me and helped me. I went into the hospital with ease and received excellent care. I now enjoy Dr. Nwadike as a friend. She’s a very caring person.”

Nwadike said, “My patients are also my friends. Their appreciation and kind words help me get through the challenges of the day. It’s gratifying when they say that they appreciate my taking time to listen to them.”

All Nations Church Supports Lifestyle Center

During the summer of 2007, the members of the All Nations Church in Norcross, Ga., rallied around New Beginnings Lifestyle Center, Inc., a supporting ministry of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. New Beginnings Lifestyle Center is a live-in facility that uses the principles of NEWSTART to support recovering alcoholics, smokers, and drug addicts. Church members have donated their time, effort, and limited funds to the ministry.

Financially unable to do more, the church board, led by Rusty Williams, pastor of the All Nations Church, enthusiastically supported the efforts of its members, Daniel Santiago and Esther Green, in their creation of the lifestyle center. Church members have helped in a number of ways, including purchasing groceries, cooking meals, providing employment, and sharing Bible studies.

For Sharon Gray, the driving factor for becoming involved was the chance to “follow the Master’s call of helping those who are in need.”

Others, like Pervis Taylor and his sister Loanne, felt it was “a means for people in the church to get actively involved and put their faith in action.”

The results of this level of support have been tremendous. Beyond lifestyle changes and recovery, all residents voluntarily requested doctrinal Bible studies. So far, four of the seven residents have been baptized.

Convention Equips Hispanic Children’s Leaders

“Guiando Nuestros Niños al Cielo,” which means “Leading our Children to Heaven,” was the theme for this year’s Georgia-Cumberland Conference Hispanic children’s ministries convention. The convention was held February 15, 16 at the Atlanta Hispanic Metropolitan Church.

The convention was a big success, with more than 130 participants in attendance, representing most of the Hispanic congregations. The guest speaker was Norma Rocio Jacquez of New Mexico. There were several interactive seminars covering topics such as teaching kids with nature, children’s church, and teaching children to think. The event was coordinated by Nancy Ortiz and Karen Gonzalez, with the help of a number of pastors’ wives.

During the same weekend, a convention was also held in Portuguese at the Atlanta Brazilian Church. The speaker for the Portuguese convention was Daleth Feitoza of Boston, Mass., and there were 10 Brazilian teachers in attendance.

Missions on Your Mind?

Want to be a missionary to Uganda, Africa? Georgia-Cumberland Conference is sponsoring a mission trip to northern Uganda (Gulu area), July 11-26, to conduct evangelistic meetings. Still needed are medical personnel: especially doctors, nurses, and dentists, as well as support personnel (registration helpers, temperature and blood pressure assistants, etc.). Needed are evangelistic teams with speakers, health presenters, children’s ministries, support team members, etc. They are also constructing a church building and need construction workers, and helpers. The trip is open to any Conference member in good health who has a valid U.S. passport. Contact Jan Levin at 770-361-7623, or email jmlevin@gccsda.com.

Seminars and training sessions at the convention allowed participants to get hands-on experience with the activities.
Pensacola Pastor Weighs in on Evolution Controversy

James Mangum’s busy schedule was interrupted when a FOX News crew unexpectedly stopped by his office.

James Mangum, pastor, was sitting at his desk preparing to teach a Bible study when he noticed a WALA FOX 10 news van circle the church parking lot and stop in front of his office. Two men got out of the van, knocked on his office door, and asked him if he would like to share a religious point of view about the new ruling in Florida allowing evolution to be taught in the public schools as “scientific theory.” (Previously the State standard referred to “change over time.”)

Mangum, who pastors the University Parkway Church in Pensacola, Fla., told the television news crew that an interview would be fine, and asked when could they schedule a time for it. The men replied “right now.” They had just been to the nearby University of West Florida to interview a biology professor and were on their way back to their station in Mobile, Ala. They decided to try to get a religious viewpoint and had spotted the Seventh-day Adventist Church sign along the way.

After asking his Bible students if they minded a brief delay, Mangum agreed to the impromptu interview, and the FOX 10 news team set up their camera. For the next 10 minutes, the interviewer proceeded to ask him what he thought about evolution and if it should be taught in schools. Mangum responded that he didn’t see the advantage in teaching evolution, but he did see an advantage in teaching creation. “I see the effects on kids when they realize that a loving Creator has a purpose for us, even though there are times when we don’t understand why things happen in our lives.”

The basis of evolution is shaky, Mangum added, while belief in God is solid. “There is a God, a Creator, versus the idea that there’s a theory that this is how it happened.”

Back at the television studio, the interviews with both Mangum and the University of West Florida biology professor, Christopher Pomeroy, were combined into a feature video clip which aired that evening. (WALA FOX Channel 10 broadcasts to a wide television audience from Mobile, Ala., to Pensacola, Fla.)

For his part, Pomeroy said that many people don’t understand that a scientific theory is more than a hunch. He pointed out that in science, a theory is an explanation based on fact. “If you want to believe in God, or you don’t, this is a biological process,” he said.

In switching back and forth between Mangum and Pomeroy for the differing viewpoints, the last word on air was that of Mangum, who observed: “The idea of a Creator is a big part of Christianity, as opposed to the idea that it happened on its own, without a reason.”

The reporter concluded the news feature with the comment that nobody gets the last word on creation versus evolution at this time because the debate “won’t end anytime soon.” For Christians who believe God’s Word, however, there really isn’t a debate. Regarding his unexpected media exposure, Mangum noted, “It was a great opportunity for our church to be seen on television with what we teach about our Heavenly Father as our Creator, and the First Angel’s message.”

Pastor Dedication Held at Bonifay

Mel Eisele, Conference president, met with the members of the Bonifay, Fla., Church, for a special dedication service for their new pastor, Jeff Westburg, on Sabbath, January 19.

The small church family had prayed and waited patiently for a pastor and were grateful when Westburg agreed to serve the Bonifay, Mariana, and Northbay churches. The members are benefitting from the leadership of Westburg and also enjoying the addition of Karen, his wife, and two children, Erin and Joel, to their church family.

Athens Prayer Garden Invites Visitors

With Janet Arnett’s (right) perseverance, and the artistic talent of her daughter, Beth Campell, the Prayer Room has become a beautiful place for prayer.

The Athens, Ala., Church wants every member in 2008 to give top priority to increasing his or her prayer time. This emphasis on increased prayer time began last year with a series of meetings on Prayer Warrior Ministry, followed by the election of Janet Arnett as prayer ministries director.

Under Arnett’s leadership, prayer was promoted as a powerful tool for personal growth. She, along with other leaders in the church, also concentrated on prayer as essential to outreach ministry. One of Arnett’s major goals was to locate a place in the church that could be set aside for personal prayer and meditation — a place where members could come early on Sabbath mornings or before Prayer Meetings and spend time alone with God.

An under-utilized room in the church was found, and Arnett transformed it, at her own expense, into a dedicated Prayer Room.

On Sabbath morning, soft music is played, highlighting God’s gift of nature with sounds of waterfalls and birds. When Arnett’s daughter, Beth Campbell, visited her mother, she saw how important the Prayer Room was to her mother and the church members. Campbell has been painting murals for more than 12 years, and with her artistic skills, she transformed the Prayer Room into a peaceful garden scene with a beautiful Eden-like mural.

One member expressed: “Prayer is the most holy exercises of the soul (5T201), and the Athens Church is exceptionally blessed to have such a beautiful place to approach God’s throne throughout this coming year.”

Montgomery First Goes ’Round the World

During the afternoon of February 10, more than 70 members and friends of the Montgomery, Ala., First Church enjoyed foods from around the world during an international food fair. Cuisines representing many continents were available.

The attendees sampled food and drinks from Russia, Ukraine, Germany, Austria, Holland, Turkey, Nigeria, Guatemala, Mexico, Peru, and Indonesia. They also enjoyed Cajun food from southern Louisiana.

Norm Hobbs, a church elder, and his wife, April, organized the food fair. “We had so many people who came from other countries or who descended from people from across the globe,” Hobbs commented.

“We thought that an international food festival would be a great way to get to know more about them, their countries, cultures, and each other.”

In addition to the food and drinks, many brought items from their countries, posters, and pictures. Some dressed in native costumes, such as Ngozi Ajegbui who comes from Nigeria; Anita Shelton who, with her husband, Don, conducted a mission trip to Ukraine; and April Hobbs, who spent time in Turkey as a child, and her two children, Savannah and Nelson.

“We were so glad we could celebrate the unity of God’s family through such diversity in this way,” commented Barry Mahorney, pastor. “After all, the Scriptures tell us that all who believe in Jesus Christ as the Son of God who died for our sins are joint heirs to the kingdom of God.”

Disaster Response Becomes an United Effort

Severe thunderstorms with high winds and numerous tornadoes struck middle and western Tennessee on February 5, 2008, leaving 33 fatalities and 192 injuries. More than 700 homes and businesses were destroyed or damaged across 14 counties.

Adventist Community Services (ACS) was asked by the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency (TEMA) to manage a resource staging center to receive and disperse donated goods to the affected counties in Tennessee. The facility opened on February 14.

In addition, the City of Nashville asked ACS to manage a collection site in the parking lot of the Tennessee Titans football stadium in Nashville to serve the disaster response needs of the greater Nashville area, as well as to contribute to the needs throughout the state. ACS provided the management team to direct this operation; the City of Nashville provided the volunteers. ACS also provided a management team to open a distribution center in Lafayette, Macon County, Tenn., one of the areas hardest hit by the storms.

Madison Academy students were deployed to Jackson, Tenn., where they assisted with debris removal and clean-up. Alan Craig, the maintenance director from Madison Academy, was able to get work gloves and hard hats from Home Depot at a discount for the students to use. With donated money they purchased two chain saws, which were invaluable when they arrived on scene.

Carrying armloads of debris, branches, and logs, the students moved literally tons of trees and rubble from the yards to the street to be picked up. Michael Durocher says, “I must have cut 200 logs today and hauled away a thousand pounds of wood.”

Andrew Jamieson, chaplain of Madison Academy, said, “The hardest part of the clean-up was carrying toys, broken trophies, and other personal items to the debris pile.” Lives had been changed forever. “People lost everything.” Madison Academy was blessed to be able to lend a hand and make a small impact in the lives of the victims. Ryan Tomlin said, “I’m glad we could go and touch the lives of some of the people who lost so much in the disaster.” Student volunteers and staff stayed at the local Adventist church in Jackson which was not damaged.

Meanwhile, in Macon County, a local warehouse was being used as a center for the tornado victims to come and receive immediate help with food, clothing, and other supplies. The building was soon filled with donated goods, and the nearby County fairgrounds buildings were opened to receive the overflow donations.

During a three-day period, shifts of 25 students and staff members from Highland Academy worked at the fairgrounds to sort, fold, and stack the mountain of clothing into sizes and categories. In another building, thousands of cans, boxes, and packages of food were sorted, categorized, and re-boxed to be sent to other distribution centers where families could get immediate help. The students responded to the challenge with hard work and determination. They did not stop until all of the huge bins of food and clothing items had been organized.

Perhaps as important as the help given by the students is the blessing they receive from helping. Bradley Newmyer, said, “It made me realize that I take everything for granted.” Ari Guindon added, “I liked being able to show Christ through actions and not just words.”

New Company Formed in Frankfort

A company of believers was organized in Frankfort, Ky., Sabbath, February 9, 2008. Marvin Lowman, Conference executive secretary, spoke to a nearly full church in his sermon titled “Called Out, Sent Out.” After explaining the significance of becoming an organized company, Lowman challenged the congregation to make a difference in the community by fulfilling its role as a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, and God’s special possession based on 1 Peter 2:9.

Maintaining a Seventh-day Adventist presence in Frankfort, has been elusive. Adversity of one kind or another has plagued Adventist congregations in Frankfort for decades. Under the leadership of James Byrd, a Bible worker who also serves as the pastor, attendance and membership have grown. Authorization to be organized as a company was granted at the Conference Executive Committee meeting in November 2007. Twenty-five people indicated their desire to unite with the Frankfort Company. Byrd continues to study with others who will soon be members as well.

Church Opens in Lebanon

Wilson County, Tenn., is no longer a dark county. For more than 10 years church members in Lebanon, Tenn., have dreamed of having a church of their own. They were grateful to be able to rent the Primitive Baptist Church, but it wasn’t like having their own church.

On February 2, 2007, their dreams began to become a reality. It was a very cold winter day when the groundbreaking took place, but a number of members and friends came to share the occasion.

Some months later the congregation could actually see the building going up in spite of delays caused by resistance from the city. Every heart was filled with happiness on December 8, 2007, when the first church service was held in the new church. Each member has worked, prayed, and liberally given so this could happen, and God has blessed.

Mt. Olive Church Holds Super Bowl Social

A few years ago a football game was just that, a football game. Today it is a ministry opportunity. Super Bowl Sunday became a super witnessing opportunity. There were many Super Bowl parties across metro Atlanta, Ga., but probably none welcomed by its guests more than the one at Mt. Olive Church in East Point, Ga.

Mt. Olive hosted its fourth annual Super Bowl party for the homeless. On Sabbath, twice each month, the community services department picks up about 30 men and women to bring to church for Sabbath School and worship service.

They are given access to a shower, hair cut, a meal, clothing, and goodie bag. This has been a ministry of the church for more than 10 years.

But on Super Bowl Sunday, the church picked up 30 men and women from a downtown Atlanta shelter and shuttled them in two vans to the church, where they were treated in style. Not only were they given the usual special care, but a seat near the television where they could watch and enjoy the Super Bowl.

“Watching the game really was a big thing,” said Dwagne Haskins, the director of the Mt. Olive community service department. “So is the personal care and food distributed. What sets the night apart, however, is the good feeling imparted upon a group of people who rarely experience the care or concern of others. It’s not so much about the game as it is about the fellowship. It’s saying to them that there are people who do care and who can help. It isn’t just the Super Bowl; it’s our super bowl of helping others.”

Volunteer cooks, servers, and communication staff, prepared food, arranged chairs, and set up the projector which displayed the game on the widescreen television. The guests were treated to hot veggie chili, pizza, veggie sandwiches, and hot drinks.

Betty Weston, a member of Mt. Olive, reported that their guests also benefitted from “spiritual food” that was served during game breaks.

Many of the guests expressed a desire to return to the Mt. Olive Church.

Drake Barber, pastor, stated that ministry is about sharing God’s love to everyone, which means living to evangelize each day.

Berean Honors Community African-Americans

Andrew Young, Brenda Wood, Edgar Scott, M.D., and Xernona Clayton.

Andrew Young is renowned for his contributions during the Civil Rights Movement of the 1950’s and 1960’s as he worked beside the late Martin Luther King Jr. He also was elected to Congress for three terms as a state representative for Georgia, and, in 1977, President Jimmy Carter named him Ambassador to the United Nations. He also served two terms as mayor of Atlanta and played a major role in bringing the Centennial Olympic Games to Atlanta in 1996.

Brenda Wood is the primary news anchor for the NBC affiliate, WXIA-TV, 11 Alive, in Atlanta. Throughout her 30-year career as a broadcast journalist, she has received numerous honors and awards, including 15 Emmy awards from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. She credits her success in the broadcast industries to her unwavering stance of not working on the Sabbath. Because of her excellence in news presentation, she has been chosen to represent NBC at the 2008 Summer Olympics in Beijing, China.

Edgar Scott is a physician who blazed the trail for African-Americans in Tennessee, where he was awarded privileges to operate as the first African-American surgeon in an all-white department of surgery at Erlanger Hospital.

Another civil rights pioneer was honored in the person of Xernona Clayton. Clayton was intricately involved with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), and worked for Martin Luther King Jr., and Coretta Scott King to end social injustice. She became the first black woman in the south to host a regularly scheduled television prime-time talk show.

Zion Temple Teams Up for a Special Delivery

The Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Post 8694 joined forces with the Zion Temple Adventist community services in Greenwood, S.C., to feed the needy in December 2007. Boxes were packed with food items that were collected, donated, and purchased by the VFW and the church’s community services department. The food boxes, which overflowed with collard greens, were delivered to many homes. The community services team also issued household products and personal items to numerous families. The VFW has been involved in a food distribution project for nine consecutive years. This was the first time the veterans partnered with Zion Temple to use the facility as a collection and distribution center. Anne Parks, state representative for South Carolina, was in attendance as well.

Zion Temple’s community services department regularly open its doors to the community to distribute food, clothing, and other items. They also make deliveries to the sick and shut-in members of Zion Temple and the community.

Mission Possible with GAAA Students

Recently, the Mission Possible Team joined Greater Atlanta Adventist Academy (GAAA) on an adventure that would change and impact their lives forever. The project was to beautify the local Seventh-day Adventist church and to share Jesus with the community of Griffin, Ga.

With support from the local police department, community activist, and the community services department, it was a success. Dickerson Memorial Chapel Church was host to the Mission Possible Team, under the direction and leadership of Darryl L. Howard, pastor; Sylvia Wilson, GAAA instructor; and Nickey Baker, community services leader. Thirteen seniors and two juniors from GAAA went to Dickerson Memorial and the surrounding community to participate in a weekend of community services activities. The students ranged in ages from 15 to 18.

The activities included, but were not limited to, beautification of the church and grounds, where trees were trimmed and the grass was cut. Signs, windows, doors, and steps all received a brand new coat of paint, as well as some interior walls.

The community participated in a block party, featuring local talent, as well as the distinguished voices of the GAAA students and the Tri-City Church from McDonough, Ga. Also, the block party focused on the distribution of approximately 700 articles of clothing, shoes, and other miscellaneous home furnishings.

Renewed interest in church fellowship was generated by this effort, including comments such as, “What church is doing this?” “Where do you go to church? I want to come.”

The event was a success by any standard — a community services outreach that reached more than 100 people. This one-on-one contact allowed volunteers to link individuals to the Savior — an experience of a lifetime. The plan is to make this outreach project an annual event.

Witnessing Mary Tacoma Taylor Maupin’s 102nd birthday has been an uplifting experience at Magazine Street Church in Louisville, Ky. Maupin, born in 1905, turned 102 on November 9, 2007. She continues to play melodious chords of harmony at the church, where she served for more than 60 years as organist and pianist, and currently serves as one of the Sabbath School pianists. Maupin credits her long life to God’s mercy and practicing God’s health message written by Ellen G. White. Maupin states, “Drinking plenty of water has been beneficial to my health.” As a child, she taught herself to play songs on a neighbor’s piano and later received formal musical training.

In 1926, Mary Taylor married Miller Maupin, who passed away at the age of 99 years old. To this union, seven children were born, which increased to grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and great-great-grandchildren. Before she became an Adventist, she attended the famous Wilberforce College (now University), an institution previously opened in 1856 for freed slaves, where she met her late husband.

Throughout her Adventist life, Maupin has served in various church offices and now helps the church school with fund-raising activities, including taking citrus fruit orders and hosting the Cecil and Ruth Ray Scholarship special event. Maupin, previously an educator, serves as a role model to both young and old as she promotes Adventist beliefs in her service to God.

Ephesus ACS Partners with Community

Ephesus Adventist Community Services (ACS) is on the move and has an outreach program in the Smithfield, College Hill, Enon Ridge, East Thomas, and Graymont communities of Alabama. An ACS worker is assigned to each neighborhood and attends the monthly meetings to hear concerns and plan how Ephesus can be of assistance.

Ephesus community services is also in partnership with JCCEO, networking with non-profit faith-based organizations and the United Way Food Bank. They partner with JCCEO to provide energy assistance to low-income residents of Jefferson County. This Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) is a federally funded program designed to help eligible low-income homeowners and renters meet their home heating and/or cooling needs.

The Energy Assistance Network is a partnership of local faith-based organizations working together to better serve the energy needs of Jefferson County. The amount of assistance is based on income and is given twice per year to any one applicant, once in the summer and once in the fall. Wilma Pride is the facilitator.

Every fourth Sabbath, cooked meals are prepared and taken to Linn Park to feed the homeless. Church members and volunteers accomplish this work and more than 100 individuals are served the meals. Hattie Moore, Yolanda Spencer, and Stephanie Dingome are the facilitators.

Upon requests, food is given to the needy from the food pantry. A new partnership has been formed with the United Way Food Bank to provide food for the community. Jane Blanding and Wilma Pride are the facilitators.

Care packages, lap covers, and quilts are made by the Wednesday sewing class and taken to adopted nursing homes periodically. The facilitators are Florence Shorter and Mary A. Calhoun.

Sewing and flower arrangement classes meet each Wednesday from 3 to 6 p.m. The items are given to the needy in the neighborhood. Lillie Parker and Mattie Swanson are the facilitators.

Adventists Respond to Pisgah Tornado Disaster

An EF-4 tornado with an estimated peak wind of 180 mph hit Jackson County, Ala., killing a woman as her home was demolished on February 6. The twister cut a path three-eighths of a mile wide. The tornado that hit Lawrence County was an EF-3, with an estimated peak wind of 150 mph, and left destruction along a 19-mile path that was as much as a half-mile wide. There were three other less-powerful tornadoes reported to have touched down in areas of Lamar, Marion, Fayette, Tuscaloosa, Walker, Coosa, and Talladega counties in Alabama. The total devastation from the tornado left six known dead, six hospitalized, and more than 150 residential areas including mobile homes destroyed or heavily to moderately damaged.

Wayne Blanding, Barbara Barnes, and several other members of the Central Alabama Adventist Community Service (ACS) Federation immediately went to Pisgah, Ala., on February 10, and began setting up the warehouse in the Office Furniture Outlet store on County Road 58.

Blanding, the warehouse manager, and his team worked on Monday from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., sorting and categorizing 65 pallets of food, clothes, personal hygiene items, household goods, bottled water, paper products, and cleaning supplies. By Tuesday morning the distribution center was opened to families displaced by the storm.

Twelve members of the North Alabama ACS Federation, along with Evelyn Oates, the local disaster response leader, served as escorts in helping to take care of all the basic needs of the survivors. “Being here is very rewarding, and one of the survivors invited me to her home. They are pleased to have us here,” said Oates.

Robert Spencer, federation president, served as the certified forklift operator. Since the opening of the distribution center, two to four semi-truck loads of donated goods have arrived daily. So far 350 individuals have been served, and more than 18,000 items of donated goods have been distributed to the survivors in the Pisgah and Rosalie communities.

There is a continuous flow of local volunteers and ACS volunteers from north and central Alabama of South Central Conference Adventist Community Services and Disaster Response. Total number of volunteer hours so far is 1,485.

Disaster Relief Certification Held at Ephesus

A Community Emergency Response Training (CERT) class was held in the fellowship hall at Ephesus Church from September 10 to November 5, 2007. Twenty-seven trainees attended weekly and graduated with Emergency Management Agency (EMA) certification, which is recognized nationwide.

The four instructors who providing the training from the Jefferson County EMA were Michael Harter, Tyrone Walker, Joan Ratchford, and Don Roybal.

The final examination consisted of a “mock disaster,” staged by the instructors, which involved the Ephesus Church. The staged disaster stated, “A tornado devastated the Ephesus Church facility. Many persons were injured, some seriously, by flying debris and fires. Four people were killed in the incident.” The CERT students were required to coordinate and facilitate this event according to EMA guidelines. The instructors were pleased and satisfied with their achievement, and all graduated with above average performance.

Couple’s Marriage Saved by Marriage Conference

On the verge of leaving her husband, Kathy Ahonkhai was desperate to save her marriage. Fighting back tears she stated, “I was not getting the support that I needed from my husband. He was married to his job.”

A member of the Baptist faith, she eventually turned to her husband’s brother, Emmanuel Ahonkhai, for help.

Ahonkhai, family life director at the Mt. Sinai Church and a member of Southeastern Conference’s marriage conference planning committee, had invited the couple to attend the marriage conference for years.

Unfortunately, Kathy Ahonkhai’s husband, Daniel, was not interested in attending. He was in denial and always found an excuse to avoid attending the conference. That type of behavior is typical of many men, expresses Lewis Edwards, Conference family life director.

In an act of desperation, Kathy Ahonkhai took a leap of faith and registered the couple to attend the 2007 marriage conference. She informed her husband that she would be attending the conference with or without him, and he decided to join her. Their attendance saved their marriage, and they returned for the 2008 conference.

“Marriage is a school from which you will never graduate. There is always something to learn that will improve your marriage.” states Kathy Ahonkhai.

Married five months ago and baptized just one week before attending the conference, Bob and Judith Gabriel of Sacramento, Calif., decided to attend the conference because they wanted to build a strong foundation that would help their marriage stand the test of time.

Conference presenters Paul and Debra Anderson believe that the key to a successful marriage is to put God first.

You can view streaming video of the testimony of Kathy and Daniel Ahonkhai, as well as selected seminars, at http://www.secsda.org.

Oakwood Student Makes INROADS

Last summer, Tiffany Silvera, a senior at Oakwood University in Huntsville, Ala., was one of 15 summer INROADS interns to participate in training workshops in Lakeland, Fla.

INROADS is a national database of students seeking summer internships.

Publix provided INROADS with specific information and requirements regarding available summer internships. She was chosen from a pool of 20 students.

Silvera was truly elated by the offer and felt honored to be selected, but on the other hand she said, “I felt nervous because it was my first time working in a corporate environment.” Silvera is working on a double major in finance and accounting.

She is a member of the Perrine Church in Miami, Fla. She is the daughter of Gloria Edwards and has been a Seventh-day Adventist since birth. Silvera stated that her summer internship in the Publix business analysis and reporting department was worth the experience.

She continued, “I was able to participate in team meetings and worked on a major project involving Publix. I was introduced to so much during the internship.”

Groups Aid Tornado Victims

In the wake of the deadly tornadoes that ripped through the South, Southern students and faculty organized three relief groups to help those affected by the tornadoes.

The Student Association and Campus Ministries co-sponsored two groups to Savannah, Tenn. The groups helped a family clear their land and salvage what they could of the wreckage, including finding important documents.

“It was heartbreaking to watch the people suffer,” says Kelsey Belcourt, senior nursing major. “Picking up people’s small personal items impressed me with the reality of the lives the storm had forever changed. The storm reinforced the idea in my mind that material goods are not of any real consequence in the grand scheme of life.”

Denise Dunzweiler, dean of the School of Education and Psychology, organized a 24-hour relief trip with members of the Hamilton Community Church, including Southern students, alumni, and faculty. They took donations of food, water, toiletries, clothes, and toys to Huntersville, Tenn. The group also helped clean two houses that were damaged by a tornado.

Academy Students Participate in Honor Choir Festival

Southern Adventist University hosted nearly 150 students from eight Southern Union academies for the Honor Choir Festival, February 20-23.

“The Honor Choir Festival is designed to give the students the opportunity to experience rehearsal and performance at a level that will challenge their abilities and give them the tools to return as stronger leaders for their ensembles,” says Gennevieve Brown-Kibble, music professor and festival facilitator.

The weekend came to a culmination with a performance at the Collegedale Church, under the direction of guest clinician David Gardner, director of choral activities at Southwestern College in Kansas.

“I really liked the festival,” says Jordan McKee of Collegedale Academy. “I got to meet a lot of new people and have a lot of fun and learn musical techniques that I haven’t learned before.”

“I’ve learned a lot of things,” adds Laudney Charles of Forest Lake Academy. “I know that I’m going to be a student at Southern next year.”

Tom Verrill Named Financial Vice President

Dale Bidwell, who has served as Southern’s vice president for financial administration since 1989, retired on March 1. He will be replaced by Tom Verrill, treasurer of the Florida Conference. Verrill has a master’s degree in business administration and has been serving the financial needs of the denomination since 1986. He is certified in trust services and as a public accountant.

“He will bring a strong educational background to this position, in addition to a distinguished reputation of leadership and management illustrated by his work in the Florida Conference,” says Gordon Bietz, Southern president. “He will enable us to continue strong financial management as well as the important relationships that we have with our local supportive conferences.”

“It was extremely liberating for an African-American congregation to learn that Christianity on the continent of Africa actually pre-dated the arrival of the European missionaries,” says Furman Fordham, pastor of the Riverside Chapel Church in Nashville, Tennessee. The learning resulted from presentations by Charles Bradford, D.D., Litt.D., and the Sabbath in Africa (SIA) study group on Sabbath, February 23. Riverside Chapel was the second congregation in the Southern Union to host a seminar on 2,000 years of Christianity in Africa and the Diaspora during the past six months. The Atlanta Berean Church welcomed the SIA team on September 21-22, 2007.

The SIA scholars are dedicated to advancing understanding of Africa as a historic center of the Christian faith, in which observance of the seventh-day Sabbath has been remarkably widespread. This is particularly true in Ethiopia, where Christianity took root more than 1,000 years before the era of European missions and colonialism, and in the numerous African-initiated movements that powered the explosive growth of Christianity on the continent during the 20th century.

The SIA project, however, aims at being much more than an intellectual exercise. “We believe that Psalm 68:31, ‘Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands unto God,’ is a scriptural Word whose time has come,” says Bradford. “Sometimes I am reminded of Rip Van Winkle, who went to sleep for so many years that he missed out on a great revolution,” he adds. Bradford points out first-rate scholars such as Thomas Oden (How Africa Shaped the Christian Mind, 2007) and Philip Jenkins (The Next Christendom, 2002) who are drawing attention to the centrality of Africa in the Christian story, and asks, “Shouldn’t we be even more excited? We see far greater meaning in these developments as part of the final unfolding of God’s plan of redemption.”

In his sermon at Riverside Chapel, “No Child Left Behind,” Bradford put it this way: “When you see the sons and daughters of Ham, in the Diaspora and on the continent, turn from their idols to serve the living God, you see that seismic shift of Christianity from the north to south, ‘Lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.’” In other words, he says, what is happening in Africa is a part of that the great worldwide proclamation of the Gospel that is “the ultimate sign of Christ’s return.” It is, he stresses, a message of inclusion, about a God who leaves none of his children behind, but gathers them from every nation, race, and ethnic group.

Riverside Chapel devoted the traditional Sabbath School hour to a light breakfast, followed by the first session of Sabbath in Africa presentations. The innovation proved successful as the church’s fellowship hall filled to overflowing for “From Jerusalem to Johannesburg,” a presentation by Bertram Melbourne, Ph.D. Melbourne, an administrator and professor...
Keith Burton expounds on the historic struggle in Ethiopia over fidelity to the Sabbath commandment.

at Howard University School of Divinity in Washington, D.C., discussed linguistic evidence and oral traditions suggesting that the Gospel message spread widely throughout the continent in the centuries before European contact, presumably as an extension of the witness of the Ethiopian royal official referred to in Acts 8. Fortuitously, Melbourne is also the principal author of the current quarter’s Sabbath School lessons, “Called to Discipleship,” and he led the reassembled church in the lesson study at the beginning of the afternoon session.

Kofi Owusu-Mensa, Ph.D., a Ghanaian scholar, spoke on how the Akan people of Ghana became custodians of the seventh-day Sabbath, giving Saturday the day-name for God—“Kwame.” Because it was European missionaries who introduced Sunday as the weekly day for worship in the 15th century, the Akan people subsequently applied their day-name for Sunday to all Europeans, calling them “Akwasí” or “Kwasi Bronii” (Sunday red-man).

Keith Burton, Ph.D., author of the recently published book The Blessing of Africa (InterVarsity Press, 2007), gave an indepth study on the history of Sabbath-keeping in Ethiopia, describing how the Ethiopian Christians ultimately sustained the heritage of seventh-day Sabbath observance despite the efforts of European missionaries who tried for more than a century to compel them to submit to the authority of Rome.

In addition to similar presentations, the seminar in September at the rapidly growing Atlanta Berean Church, pastored by Carlton Byrd, D.Min., opened on Friday evening with tributes to Lawrence Edward Carter Sr., Ph.D., dean of the Martin Luther King Jr. International Chapel at Morehouse College. Carter’s many achievements include creating opportunities for Christians of varying denominational persuasions to interact and enrich each other. Tribute came from Ralph Peaty, D.Min., executive secretary and chaplain of the Concerned Black Clergy of Atlanta and past president of the South Atlantic Conference; and from Godwin Mitchell, president of the Atlanta Seventh-day Adventist Pastors’ Fellowship. On behalf of the Sabbath in Africa Study Group, Harold Lee, D.Min., chairman, presented to Carter a plaque honoring his “unfailing service to people of all faiths and unrelenting endeavors to bring peace to a troubled world.”

Also, Ministry magazine editor Nikolaus Satelmajer, Ph.D., and associate editor Willie Hucks III, D.Min., were on hand to provide complimentary copies of the magazine’s October issue, which was devoted to Africa, and off the press just in time for the Atlanta seminar. Satelmajer also announced that 6,000 copies of Charles E. Bradford’s book, Sabbath Roots: The African Connection, and the accompanying study guide were on their way to Africa for distribution to all English-speaking pastors and other church workers.

The SIA project evolved after Bradford retired from the presidency of the North American Division in 1990. Reports he had heard from Adventist missionaries about encountering African peoples who already knew about the Sabbath sparked a desire to find out more and promote further research. Projects that grew out of a planning session at Oakwood University (formerly Oakwood College) in 1991, along with Bradford’s own research, led to his book, Sabbath Roots: The African Connection, published by the General Conference Ministerial Association in 1999.

A major scholarly movement toward a new awareness of the importance of the Global South (Africa, Asia, and Latin America) in the history of Christianity, as well as the contemporary outlook, was also building in the 1990’s. But the publication of Sabbath Roots in 1999 preceded a rapidly widening stream of works by influential scholars such as Jenkins, Oden, Lamin Sanneh, and Andrew Walls, adding further confirmation to Bradford’s work.

The SIA study group has presented seminars throughout the nation during the past decade, including “Conversations on 2,000 Years of Christianity and the Diaspora” at Andrews University on February 7-9.

To Bradford, one of the most important goals of SIA is to help young people of African descent to find “their ultimate affirmation in God” by seeing how directly God has been at work in their heritage through the centuries, even millennia.

For information regarding SIA seminars and publications, visit www.africanchristianity.org.

The Camp Alamisco lighthouse, situated on a rocky ledge overlooking Lake Martin, is a familiar site to the many boaters and residents who live near and play in the clear sparkling waters at the lake. During the day, the lighthouse is visible from many directions and is a reference point to boaters and other recreational watercraft users. At night the lighthouse’s signal shines across the dark lake like a welcoming beacon.

Just as the lighthouse is well known to many, so is Camp Alamisco. Not only do Gulf States Conference members appreciate the camp, but also numerous other families who choose to send their children for summer camp or who spend time at the camp themselves with their own church groups.

During the summer months more than 600 campers experience the joy of summer camping. Among this group last year were 90 Native Americans and 120 family campers. Fifty percent of the campers are not connected to the Adventist Church. When Jeff Wood, Conference youth director, was asked what he wants campers to take home with them after a week of camp, he responded, “There are three things. I want them to have a better understanding of who Jesus is and how He wants to impact their lives. I want them to develop a new skill that will become a life-long habit; and to meet someone new, whether it is another camper or staff member, that they can have a positive relationship with.”

During the seven weeks of camp last summer, there were more than 100 decisions for Bible studies and baptism. For the campers not affiliated with the Adventist Church, the goal is for them to know our faith as a Church that opens its arms to everyone, and which loves and puts Jesus first in all things.

The 46 staff members who choose to spend their summer ministering to children at camp are mostly college students from the southeast. For these young adults the objective is similar. Wood explains, “The goal is for them to develop better leadership skills, to have acquired a new, positive relationship with a camper or another staff member, and to know Jesus better.”

When the last camper and staff member leaves Alamisco at the end of the summer camping season, Jason and Stephanie Dorris, the camp ranger and his wife, gear up for another busy time. A look at the calendar will confirm that the camp is booked for almost every weekend during the year. Thirty percent of the groups who use the camp are not a part of the Adventist Church. These groups, along with members of the Conference, appreciate the rustic beauty of the camp and the friendly service. One Methodist group rents the camp for 10 weekends every year.

A gentleman who spends several weekends at camp with his church group explains it this way, “Alamisco is a peaceful place where I’m able to leave behind the normal stress of life.”

Another person says, “When I’m at Alamisco I feel as though I’m in a sanctuary.”

The goal of those affiliated with Camp Alamisco is that it continues to shine in a dark world with a warm, welcoming beacon — a beacon that invites both young and old of all faiths to come aside and gain a better understanding of Jesus.
A woman who was given a copy of Steps to Christ by a literature evangelist was so impressed with the book; she researched and found the Adventist Book Center (ABC) located in Montgomery, Alabama. When she came by she ordered seven cases of the book to give to the inmates at a women’s prison.

An elderly man looked unsure of himself as he entered the ABC. Linda Anderson, ABC manager, greeted him with a friendly, “May I help you with something?”

“Before I moved back here, I was watching the HOPE Channel on television,” the man explained. “My son told me you would know about the literature they mentioned.” Anderson helped the man find what he was looking for, and before he left she invited him to the local Adventist church. “He hasn’t attended yet, but I’m praying for Him,” says Anderson. “We won’t know until Jesus comes again how many people the Adventist Book Center has been instrumental in reaching!” Anderson says with conviction.

The success of the Gulf States Conference ABC could be measured in this year’s five percent profit increase and the impressive increased availability to the members. The book sales occurred in church fellowship halls, school gyms, or wherever it was convenient for the members. The 11 sales included the Hispanic camp meeting and the women’s retreat at Camp Alamisco. The ABC also set up a store during the annual 10-day camp meeting at Bass Memorial Academy, was back at Bass during ministers’ and teachers’ meetings, and then remained there until the next weekend for student registration. In addition to the book sales, there were 24 trips to supply vegetarian food to Bass, several other schools, and health food stores in the Conference.

However, if you talk to Anderson or Jane Haney, the part-time ABC assistant, you quickly realize that the Center’s success is about much more than facts and figures. “It’s about the people,” explains Anderson with enthusiasm. “The Book Center is a place where members can shop; talk with friends; plan for their events; pick up vegetarian food, gifts, and children’s materials; and find the resources they need for Bible studies and witnessing.” She adds that the displays and sales at the churches are also great for new members who don’t yet know what our Church has to offer.

The busy location of the ABC, with a Wal-Mart and other shops just across the street, makes it easy for the public to drop in. “People come in and ask what we believe,” Anderson says. “Some
