

A Bibliography of Recent Adventist Scholarship

by Betty Stirling

Faculty members in Seventh-day Adventist colleges and universities often have large teaching loads, as well as heavy counseling and committee assignments. But many do conduct research and write reports, produce scholarly articles and books, or compose music. Usually, their respective institutions each year compile a report of such activities. But knowledge of what has been produced frequently stops with the academic dean's office. In an attempt to remedy this lack, we have prepared a list of various kinds of publications as they have been reported to the deans.

All of the Adventist colleges and universities in the North American Division were given an opportunity to contribute to this list, but some have not yet told us what their faculty members have accomplished. We hope to be able to include their work in a later list. We would also be happy to include items published by Seventh-day Adventist scholars who are employed in secular institutions, if any would care to tell us of their work. (Send information to Betty Stirling, General Conference Board of Higher Education, Takoma Park, Washington, D.C. 20012.)

Betty Stirling is director of research for the General Conference Board of Higher Education.

Theses and dissertations have not been included unless they have been published, nor have presentations at conventions unless they were included in a printed report.

Multiple authors have been a problem. We have tried to list the publication by the name of each author connected with the institution. Because of the nature of documentation on some of the institutional reports, it has been difficult to make sure that everyone has been included in our list, or that all documentation is complete. Listing under the name of each author makes our list rather long; we may decide on another way to handle the multiple-author publications in the future.

We have categorized the items by broad subject areas. However, we have not had access to the publications, so if anyone finds his publication in the wrong area, we are sorry.

This is a new kind of venture. To get the list before a wider audience, versions appear in both the Journal of Adventist Education and SPECTRUM. The SPECTRUM list is more selective, limiting entries to publications appearing after January 1, 1974, and to articles printed in academic and professional journals. Most of these are not Adventist journals, but some are, such as Adventist Heritage, Andrews University Seminary Studies, Journal of Adventist Educa- tion, Medical Arts and Sciences, The Ministry, Origins and SPECTRUM.

We would be glad to have your comments on the list's value. We hope that annual publication of it will contribute to greater interaction within the community of Adventist scholars and writers. If you are interested in a particular item but cannot locate it, or if you want further information or dialog, please contact the author of the item directly. The list includes his employing institution.
