Dear Center for Adventist Research,

Non-profit organizations in the Lincoln community are trying something new this year, and Union College is excited to be a part of it. Today, May 17, is the first annual Give to Lincoln Day, celebrating the role of philanthropy in our city through more philanthropy. If you’ve been thinking about making a gift to the Union College Fund (or even if you haven't), today is the perfect time to give.

There is a slightly competitive aspect to this event, and not just because we want our community to know how amazing Union's alumni and friends are. A $200,000 challenge fund will be divided based on the number of donors who participate on behalf of each organization. That means your gift will grow—simply by participating.

All donations from this event will go to the Union College Fund unless designated otherwise. That fund is Union's lifeblood, supporting financial aid, the student work program, academic equipment and much more. It is an energizing force for our campus and our students. Today's gifts will help us meet our goal before closing out this fiscal year, ensuring a solid foundation to start the next school year.

Thank you so much for your support, today and always. I am constantly amazed by the generosity of our alumni, supporting Union College's mission through time, money, prayers and praise. Please consider taking this opportunity to continue that tradition.

On behalf of a grateful college,
John Wagner
Union College President

Same Rock Pile, new URL

The Rock Pile Alumni Community has a new, but familiar address. You can now find it at http://rockpile.ucollege.edu. The site still offers the same services, including a searchable alumni directory and online giving.

Union College is a Seventh-day Adventist institution of higher learning located in Lincoln, Nebraska, offering baccaulaureate and associate degrees in 27 fields of study as well as a master's in physician assistant studies.
