A Modern-day Miracle at Weimar Center

A guest attending a recent NEWSTART® session had been unable to taste or smell for ten years. In addition, she suffered from asthma and other health conditions. At the end of the program she had lost weight, lowered her blood pressure and blood sugar, and no longer had to use an asthma inhaler. But God gave her one more special gift for her before she went home.

Some of the NEWSTART staff had prayed that somehow she would be able to enjoy the food at the banquet that marked the end of the session. When Cathy, our NEWSTART program coordinator, walked up to her table she saw that some of the guests were crying. “We have just witnessed a miracle,” they said. The guest, who had been unable to taste anything for ten years, was able to enjoy the taste of the food at the banquet.
We are praising God for restoring the sense of taste to this guest who could not taste or smell at all only hours before the banquet.

Customer Service Department Seeks to Use Christ’s Methods
Earlier this year, Weimar Center’s customer service department moved to a new location in the administration building. The move improved the department’s workspace and also signaled a new focus for the guest services team.

“We renewed our commitment to superior service,” says Dean Dennis, Chief Officer of Marketing and Development. “We realized that our service must exceed all earthly standards. We must provide the same level of service that Christ himself would give to the sick, poor, and hurting — a selfless service.”

To put this goal into place, the department is providing new training for staff members, a new price structure for the NEWSTART Program, and a new program that brings student workers to the department.

One of the students, Tiffany, is a freshmen in the pre-medicine program. She says that being encouraged to take time to talk to guests is refreshing. “We can spend time with them on the phone and actually discuss their needs and problems, and find solutions,” she says.

The close connection with guests does not end when they come to a NEWSTART program. “We are encouraged to walk with the guests and eat with them once they get here,” says Tiffany. “We are here to make sure they have a good experience from their first call until they leave for home after the NEWSTART banquet.

Christin, who is studying pre-nursing, finds that her work in customer service contributes to her education. “I’m able to do a lot of lifestyle counseling, which is a big part of what I want to do as a nurse,” she says. “I’m so thankful for a job that provides such a ministry opportunity. I’m able to pray with people many times throughout the day and really listen to their needs. It is so fulfilling to see guests get on the road to health and to know that I played a part in that.”
