Announcing a New Health Care Chaplaincy Cohort!

We are pleased to announce a new Doctor of Ministry concentration, especially for ministry professionals in health care chaplaincy. The health care chaplaincy concentration in the Andrews University Doctor of Ministry program seeks to create competency in five areas related to the discipline: academic, spiritual and theological formation, clinical, professional, and self-reflection. The first intensive will be February 15-27, 2009, meeting at the campus of Loma Linda University. If you are interested, submit your application now! Call 888-717-6244 or email dmin@andrews.edu.

Dr. Siroj Sorajjakool (pictured right), PhD, Professor, Loma Linda University and Adjunct Clinical Professor, Claremont School of Theology, will serve as concentration coordinator.

To view a color brochure describing more details for this concentration, see the DMin website at http://www.andrews.edu/sem/dmin/concentrations/chaplaincy/chaplaincy\_brochure.pdf.

Orientations for Project Advisors

Yearly attendance at an orientation session is expected for those who serve as project advisors. The purpose is to assure that all of the advisors in the DMin program clearly understand the vision of the DMin program, are updated on policy changes relative to the DMin project dissertation, and have the opportunity for dialogue. Twenty-five internal advisors and thirty-six external advisors have attended an advisor's orientation for a total of 61. The final orientation session will be offered June 10, which should bring the total attendance to about 70. As the DMin Project Coach I want to thank each advisor. So much of the success of the DMin program and its participants is due to your selfless work.

Digitizing DMin Project Dissertations

Good news! DMin project dissertations may now be digitized full-text through the James White Library with no digitizing fee. Project authors may upload their own electronic files. The Seminary librarian, Professor Terry Robertson, is spearheading this initiative and will be happy to help you with the process. He can be reached at 269-471-3269. More details will soon be provided on the DMin website.

You will also be interested to know that since 2002, your work is fully protected under U.S. copyright law without additional registration.
