Part 1: What is worship?

Invocation & Response

We invite you to join our return to the core of worship, and call you to explore the ways which God has given us to praise Him. We assemble from many lands, cultures, and churches, together seeking our Creator. Lift your voices and make this declaration: Let us worship together as many persons, but one body, united in Christ.

Scripture Reading: John 4:19-26
Alyssa Henriquez & Lyle Goulbourne

The woman said to Him, “Sir, I perceive that You are a prophet. Our fathers worshiped on this mountain, and you Jews say that in Jerusalem is the place where one ought to worship.”

Jesus said to her, “Woman, believe Me, the hour is coming when you will neither on this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, worship the Father. You worship what you do not know; we know what we worship, for salvation is of the Jews. But the hour is coming, and now is, when the true worshipers will worship the Father in spirit and truth; for the Father is seeking such to worship Him. God is Spirit, and those who worship Him must worship in spirit and truth.”

The woman said to Him, “I know that Messiah is coming” (who is called Christ). “When He comes, He will tell us all things.”

Jesus said to her, “I who speak to you am He.”
“...the Sabbath prescription is a loving reminder to take full advantage of a condition that already exists. At rest, our souls are restored. This is the only commandment that begins with the word 'remember,' as if it refers to something we already know, but have forgotten. It is good. It is whole. It is beautiful. In our hurry and worry and acquiring and working, we forget. Rest, take delight in the goodness of creation, and remember how good it is.

Sabbath is a day we walk in the forest, walk among the fruits of our harvest and the ruins of our desperations, and see what lives. On the Sabbath, we rest. And see that it is good.”

“Christ comes alive in the communion between people. When we are alone, even joy is, in a way, sorrow’s flower: lovely, necessary, sustaining, but blooming in loneliness, rooted in grief. I’m not sure you can have communion with other people without these moments in which sorrow has opened in you, and for you; and I am pretty certain that without shared social devotion one’s solitary experiences of God wither into a form of withholding, spiritual stinginess, the light of Christ growing ever fainter in the glooms of the self. What this means is that even if you are socially shy and generally inarticulate about spiritual matters—and I say this as someone who finds casual social interactions often quite difficult and my own feelings about faith intractably mute—you must not swerve from the engagements God offers you. These will occur in the most unlikely places, and with people for whom your first instinct may be aversion. Dietrich Bonhoeffer says that Christ is always stronger in our brother’s heart than in our own, which is to say, first, that we depend on others for our faith, and second, that the love of Christ is not something you can ever hoard. Human love catalyzes the love of Christ. And this explains why that love seems at once so forceful and so fugitive, and why, ‘while we speak of this, and yearn toward it,’ as Augustine says, ‘we barely touch it in a quick shudder of the heart.’”

Part 2: How and why do we worship?

Invocation & Response

From the solemn pipe organ and stately service to the upbeat drum and lively celebrations, we all gather to one God. We come with a singular purpose: the uplifting of our Sovereign Lord. We will worship together in our many ways, espousing our praise to exalt our savior. Let us worship together as many persons, but one body, united in Christ.

Scripture Reading: Psalm 95: 1-7

Oh come, let us sing to the Lord!
Let us shout joyfully to the Rock of our salvation.

Let us come before His presence with thanksgiving;
Let us shout joyfully to Him with psalms.

For the Lord is the great God,
And the great King above all gods.

In His hand are the deep places of the earth;
The heights of the hills are His also.

The sea is His, for He made it;
And His hands formed the dry land.

Oh come, let us worship and bow down;
Let us kneel before the Lord our Maker.

For He is our God,
And we are the people of His pasture,
And the sheep of His hand.

Reading: Worship in Song

Dietrich Bonhoeffer
From Life Together (1939)

“Speak to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs” (Eph. 5:19). Our song on earth is speech. It is the sung Word. Why do Christians sing when they are together? The reason is, quite simply, because in singing together it is possible for them to speak and pray the same Word at the same time; in other words, because here they can unite in the Word. All devotion, all attention should be concentrated upon the Word in the hymn. The fact that we do not speak it but sing it only expresses the fact that our spoken words are inadequate to express what we want to say, that the burden of our song goes far beyond all human words. Yet we do not hum a melody; we sing words of praise to God, words of thanksgiving, confession, and prayer. Thus the music is completely the servant of the Word. It elucidates the Word in its mystery.”

Mary Oliver
“Praying” (2006)

It doesn’t have to be the blue iris, it could be weeds in a vacant lot, or a few small stones; just pay attention, then patch

a few words together and don’t try to make them elaborate, this isn’t a contest but the doorway into thanks, and a silence in which another voice may speak.

Reading: Worship in Nature

Emily Dickinson
“Some keep the Sabbath going to Church” (1861)

Some keep the Sabbath going to Church –
I keep it, staying at Home –
With a Bobolink for a Chorister –
And an Orchard, for a Dome –

Some keep the Sabbath in Surplice –
I, just wear my Wings –
And instead of tolling the Bell, for Church,
Our little Sexton – sings.

God preaches, a noted Clergyman –
And the sermon is never long,
So instead of getting to Heaven, at last –
I’m going, all along.

Part 3: How can worship be alienating?

Invocation & Response

In coming together, let our unity not exclude the wanderer, the outsider, and the downtrodden. Let our worship not restrain those seeking life in Christ. As disciples of Christ, we will not isolate our fellow neighbor; instead we will accept our fellow humans in love. Let us worship together as many persons, but one body, united in Christ.
Then Jesus spoke to the multitudes and to His disciples, saying: “The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses’ seat. Therefore whatever they tell you to observe, that observe and do, but do not do according to their works; for they say, and do not do. For they bind heavy burdens, hard to bear, and lay them on men’s shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers. But all their works they do to be seen by men.

“But woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for you neither go in yourselves, nor do you allow those who are entering to go in.

“Woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! For you pay tithe of mint and anise and cumin, and have neglected the weightier matters of the law: justice and mercy and faith. These you ought to have done, without leaving the others undone. Blind guides, who strain out a gnat and swallow a camel!

“Savior” (1990)

Petulant priests, greedy centurions, and one million incensed gestures stand between your love and me.

Your agape sacrifice is reduced to colored glass, vapid penance, and the tedium of ritual.

Your footprints yet mark the crest of billowing seas but your joy fades upon the tablets of ordained prophets.

Visit us again, Savior.

Your children, burdened with disbelief, blinded by a patina of wisdom, carom down this vale of fear. We cry for you although we have lost your name.
That with this bright believing band
    I have no claim to be,
That faiths by which my comrades stand
    Seem fantasies to me,
And mirage-mists their Shining Land,
    Is a strange destiny.

Why thus my soul should be consigned
    To infelicity,
Why always I must feel as blind
    To sights my brethren see,
Why joys they have found I cannot find,
    Abides a mystery.

Since heart of mine knows not that ease
    Which they know; since it be
That He who breathes All’s-Well to these Breathes no All’s-Well to me,
My lack might move their sympathies
    And Christian charity!

I am like a gazer who should mark
    An inland company
Standing upfingered, with, “Hark! hark!
    The glorious distant sea!”
And feel, “Alas, ‘tis but yon dark
    And wind-swept pine to me!”

Yet I would bear my shortcomings
    With meet tranquility,
But for the charge that blessed things
    I’d liefer not have be.
O, doth a bird beshorn of wings
    Go earth-bound willfully!

Enough. As yet disquiet clings
    About us. Rest shall we.

Part 4: How can worship be healing and transformative?

Invocation & Response

Our worship should be a safe haven for expression, a welcoming of thought, and the relieving of burdens. Let our worship create an atmosphere of belonging—an embrace from the divine. We will shelter those searching for peace, longing for safety within our communion. Let God draw the brokenhearted by our gathering to heal and transform. Let us worship together as many persons, but one body, united in Christ.

Scripture Reading: 2 Cor. 1:3-5

Ruben Colon

Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and God of all comfort, who comforts us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort those who are in any trouble, with the comfort with which we ourselves are comforted by God. For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also abounds through Christ.

Reading: Worship as Compassion

Kathleen Norris

From Amazing Grace (1998)

“Converting a painful inheritance into something good requires all the discernment we can muster, both from what is within us, and what we can glean from mentors. The worst of the curses that people inflict on us, the real abuse and terror, can’t be forgotten or undone, but they can be put to good use in the new life that one has taken up. It is a kind of death; the lid closes on what went before. But the past is not denied. And we are still here, with all of our talents, gifts, and failings, our strengths and weaknesses. All the baggage comes along: nothing wasted, nothing lost. Perhaps the greatest blessing that religious inheritance can bestow is an open mind, one that can listen without judging. It is rare enough that we recognize it in another when we encounter it…Such people do not have a closed-off air, nor a boastful demeanor. In them, it is clear, their wounds have opened the way to compassion for others. And compassion is the strength and soul of a religion.”

From God and the Pandemic (2020)

“It was…Christians who built hospitals and hospices. The followers of Jesus were first in the field, too, in making education available outside the circles of the elite, and in the care of the poor. All were needed, as they still are. …throughout Church history, Jesus’ followers have…got on with the job. They have visited the prisoners, cared for the wounded, welcomed the strangers, fed the hungry. And they have tended the sick. In most past ages that has been done day and night, in good times and bad, in the Black Death and the Bubonic Plague, in war and peace, in the slums of the city and the isolated farmhouses. Clergy and laity alike have done it, at considerable and often fatal risk to themselves. The urge to meet the Lord himself in the faces of the needy—in accordance with Matthew 25—has always been strong.”

All Creatures of Our God and King

1. All creatures of our God and King,
   Lift up your voice with us and sing:
   Alleluia! Alleluia! O burning sun with golden beam.
   And silver moon with softer gleam.

2. O rushing wind and breezes soft,
   O clouds that ride the winds afoe.
   Oh, praise Him! Alleluia! O rising morn, in praise rejoice.
   O lights of evening, find a voice.

3. O flowing waters, pure and clear,
   Make music for your Lord to hear.
   Oh, praise Him! Alleluia! O fire so masterful and bright.
   Providing us with warmth and light.

4. Let all things their Creator bless,
   And worship Him in humble fear.
   Oh, praise Him! Alleluia! Oh, praise the Father, praise the Son.
   And praise the Spirit, three in One!

ADORATION AND PRAISE
Lord, Whose Love in Humble Service

1. Lord, whose love in humble service Bore the weight of human need,
   Who upon the cross, for sake, Worked Your mercy’s perfect deed:
   We, Your servants, bring the worship Not of voice alone, but heart;
   Consecrating to Your purpose Every gift which You impart.

2. Still Your children wander homeless; Still the hungry cry for bread;
   Still the captives long for freedom; Still in grief we mourn our dead.
   As You, Lord, in deep compassion Healed the sick and freed the soul,
   By Your Spirit send Your power To our world to make it whole.

3. As we worship, grant us vision, Till your love’s realising light
   In its height and depth and greatness Dawns upon our quickened sight.
   Making known the needs and burdens Your compassion bids us bear,
   Stirring us to ardent service, Your abundant life to share.
