

INTERIOR DESIGN

What can I do with this major?

AREAS	EMPLOYERS	STRATEGIES/INFORMATION
INTERIOR DESIGN Commercial Design Including: Offices Retail Healthcare Hospitals and clinics Medical offices Hospitality Restaurants Bars and Clubs Hotels and Motels Resorts Theaters Civic Airports Government Facilities Residential Design Single-Family Houses Apartments Condominiums In-store Design Design Specialties Including: Bath Kitchen Lighting Ergonomic Design Green Design Renovations Sales/Marketing Education	Design firms Architecture firms Design divisions of corporations/institutions Carpet manufacturers Furniture and home stores Federal government departments Colleges and universities Self-employed	Create a portfolio of your work while in school. Complete an internship to gain relevant experience. After finishing a design degree and gaining required experience, prepare to take the qualifying exam administered by the National Council for Interior Design Qualification. Learn to understand both the artistic, creative side and the business, technical side of design to assure success in the field. Become familiar with Computer Aided Design (CAD) software. Develop strong communication skills which are important when interacting with clients and writing work proposals. Understand the importance of learning to listen attentively to others and providing excellent customer service. Learn to work well with different types of people including clients, architects, contractors and other service providers. Gain experience working in a fast-paced environment and meeting deadlines. Plan to work on multiple projects at a time. Join relevant student organizations and seek leadership roles. Become a student member of the American Society of Interior Designers. Conduct informational interviews with interior designers in a variety of settings to learn about particular areas of interest. Build a network of contacts. Interior designers are four times as likely to be self-employed than people in other specialty professions. Most others work in small firms of 1 to 5 employees. (BLS)

AREAS RELATED TO INTERIOR DESIGN

Those with training in interior design may pursue the following career fields if they have the right combination of experiences. Some areas may require additional training or graduate degrees. If these areas interest you, take relevant coursework, complete internships, and get involved in related activities to prepare for the fields. For example, someone trained in interior design who wants to work for a design publication should develop strong writing skills, consider minoring in journalism or English, work for a campus or community newspaper, etc.

Some related fields are:

- Set design for stage and screen
- Lighting design
- Furniture design
- Product development
- Journalism, e.g. design magazines
- Illustration/rendering
- Computer rendering
- Facility management
- Historic preservation